

CONGRESS CONVENES FOR 6 MONTHS SESSION

WILL DEAL WITH TWO ISSUES, TARIFF AND PROHIBITION

LONG DELAYED TARIFF MEASURE IS OFFICIAL PENDING BUSINESS OF SENATE

PROHIBITION IS THE UNOFFICIAL BUSINESS OF BOTH HOUSES OF CONGRESS

By PAUL R. MALLON
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Washington, Jan. 6.—Already under the spell of the looming November congressional elections, congress convened today for a straightaway session of six months or more. It will deal with two important political issues—tariff and prohibition.

The long delayed tariff measure, introduced nearly a year ago, is the official pending business of the senate, but prohibition is the unofficial business of both houses.

The situation is especially interesting because the entire house and one-third of the senate must go from this session into the fall campaigns, to be judged, largely, on the basis of records made at this time.

Probabilities are there will be a thorough airing of views, particularly among the dries who are divided over the charges made by the leading republican dry campaigner, Senator Borah of Idaho, against the existing enforcement system.

The house is expected to take the issue by the horns immediately, and adopt, after some debate, the Jones resolution calling for a congressional committee to inquire into proposed unification of enforcement agencies under the justice department. Later, probably about February 1, there will be another fight over prohibition appropriations. Meanwhile the preliminary report of President Hoover's law enforcement commission is to be made public.

Senate leaders are hoping to curtail prohibition debate as much as possible by appealing for early action on the tariff.

Prospects for the tariff bill never looked brighter. Estimates of the various groups as to when it will pass the senate vary from three to six weeks, but no one believes the bill will be held up longer than six weeks.

Then it will go to conference with the house. While agreement between the two houses will be difficult because of wide differences in the bills favored by each, methods of agreement already are being discussed. More congressional authorities now feel an agreement is more possible than ever before.

The senate will go to work immediately on the tariff with a gentleman's agreement between the groups that no other business will be permitted to intervene.

The house will work on the war department appropriation bill which was reported from committee today.

Off the floor, senate committees are to resume inquiries this week into lobby activities, radio and cotton speculation. Disputes also have arisen among republicans over committee assignments, but an agreement is expected by the committee on committees tomorrow. The agreement is expected to permit Senator LaFollette, independent republican, Wisconsin, a place on the finance committee.

GEN. PERSHING IS NOT CANDIDATE FOR U. S. SENATE

Washington, Jan. 6.—(U.P.)—General John J. Pershing has decided against becoming a candidate for the United States senate from Nebraska.

Pershing has made no public expression of his intention, but his associates here were positive he would not oppose Senator Norris for the republican nomination. Pershing's refusal to join in a political contest is believed to have been made known to friends in Nebraska who suggested that he oppose Norris.

SENATOR HEFLIN CALLED TO ORDER

ON ATTEMPTED FLIGHT TO NOME

Nome, Alaska, Jan. 6.—(U.P.)—Whereabouts or fate of Captain Pat Reid, leader of the Eielson rescue expedition of the Aviation Corporation, and three companions were still a mystery today.

A pilot who had searched yesterday in the region of Norton Bay and the Koyukuk river, reported that despite good visibility he saw no trace of the missing plane and its passengers.

Reid, with Major P. C. Deckhard, left Fairbanks Saturday on an attempted flight to Nome. One other plane of the expedition was left behind after being damaged on a previous attempt to take off.

The two airmen passed over Nulato, about 250 miles from Nome, but soon after became separated in a heavy fog. Major Deckhard turned back and landed safely at Nulato, but nothing has since been heard of Captain Reid and his companions.

The region over which he was flying is fairly densely populated, however, and no fears were felt for his safety.

Major Deckhard reported that a stiff gale was today preventing his takeoff for a flight in search of Reid, after which he plans to continue to Nome. The final preparations will be made for the hop to Teller, from where the expedition plans to commence its flight into Siberia in search of Carl Ben Eielson.

Eielson and his mechanic, Earl Borland, have been lost nearly two months in the vicinity of Cape North, Siberia, while on a flight to the relief of the ship Nanuk.

NEAUT, OHIO

OVERHEATED COAL STOVE BELIEVED TO HAVE BEEN CAUSE OF FIRE

Conneaut, O., Jan. 6.—(U.P.)—Mrs. James Scribner fought smoke and flames to get to her five children trapped in their burning home here today but only two survived.

Florence, 5, was found dead under the kitchen sink by firemen. Josephine, 3, and Alva, three months, died later in a hospital of their burns after their mother had carried them from their bed out of the burning house.

Thomas, 13, and Martin, 6, jumped from a second story window and were saved.

Mrs. Scribner is in a hospital here suffering from shock.

An overheated coal stove was believed the cause of the fire.

CHIEF JUSTICE TAFT IS ILL FROM OVERWORK

Washington, Jan. 7.—(U.P.)—Chief Justice William Howard Taft will enter Garfield hospital here tomorrow for a complete rest for an illness brought about by overwork, it was announced today.

After a week's treatment there, the chief justice will go to Asheville, N. C., for a stay of two or three weeks. His trouble, a recurrence of a bladder ailment from which he had suffered for some time, was described as "not serious" by his doctor, Dr. Frank Hagner.

UNITED PRESS FINDS A LONG SOUGHT WITNESS

OTIS HEFNER IDENTIFIED WITH WILLIAM DESMOND TAY-LOR MYSTERY

HEFNER BELIEVED TO BE LINK
SOUGHT BY LOS ANGELES
DISTRICT ATTORNEY

By FRANK H. BARTHOLOMEW
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
(Copyright, 1930, by United Press)

San Francisco, Jan. 6.—Otis Hefner, missing key witness in the William Desmond Taylor murder mystery, was found today by the United Press.

Hefner is the man who former Governor Friend William Richardson said had revealed to him the name of the person who murdered the famous motion picture director in February, 1922.

He is believed to be the man to whom Burton Pitts, Los Angeles district attorney, referred two weeks ago when he said:

"We have reconstructed the scene of the killing and we have built an almost perfect case. Only one link remains to be filled."

Found by George E. Powers, a reporter for the United Press, Hefner repeated and amplified the disclosures made to the governor and the state parole board secretly in 1926, which resulted in his release from Folsom penitentiary to save his life.

These disclosures, intended by the governor for presentation to the Los Angeles grand jury, leaked out prematurely and, in the opinion of the state parole board, placed Hefner in danger of assassination at the hands of the dope ring in prison.

Found in civil life under another name, supporting his invalid wife and baby, Hefner answered these direct questions put to him by the United Press:

Q. Do you know anything of the murder of William Desmond Taylor?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know who committed the murder?

A. Yes.

Q. Who was it?

A. ——— (He named a motion picture celebrity).

Q. How do you know this?

A. I was mixed up along with Edward Sands, formerly employed by Taylor, in a narcotic ring in southern California. Sands was delivering dope to Taylor. The night Taylor was murdered I went with Sands to Taylor's house. We saw ——— leaving the premises, and a few minutes later Sands discovered Taylor's body.

Q. When was this?

A. About 2 A. M. February 2, 1922.

Q. Do you know any motive for the murder?

A. Yes. I heard direct threats against Taylor's life because he had turned "rat" and was informing on the dope ring. Also Sands told me that Taylor was in trouble because of his love affairs.

Q. Have you ever told this to officials?

A. Yes, in 1928, I made a full statement for Governor Richardson to Thomas M. Gannon and other officials of the state prison board and offered to appear before the Los Angeles grand jury.

Hefner, tall, lean and bronzed, asserted that since his release from Folsom penitentiary he had been attempting to re-establish himself as a good citizen.

"I'm still willing to go before the Los Angeles grand jury and tell what I know, to clear up this eight-year-old mystery," he said. I hope it can be done—if it is absolutely necessary—without subjecting my wife to humiliation, and sacrificing the place I've now won back by three years of hard work and no play. I don't want to be known as an ex-con. My new identity is clean. I've worked hard to make it so."

His statement in part made to the United Press and signed by him, follows:

"I came out of Texas, a green young fellow in my twenties, and got in with a bad bunch in southern California, primarily engaged in the dope racket. "One of these crooks was Edward Sands, who has ostensibly worked as a chauffeur and valet for William Desmond Taylor. Actually Taylor was distributing a lot of 'hype' to people in the movie business, including ——— (Again naming the person he asserted had committed the murder). "Word was passed around in this dope ring after awhile that Taylor had turned 'rat' and was tipping us off to federal officials. I heard several conversations in which it was remarked that Taylor would be bumped off if he didn't play square."

"On the evening of February 2, 1922, Sands and I were out at Redondo Beach on a job and saw Taylor ——— (naming two motion picture actresses) having dinner in a cafe."

"We went back to town and Sands went up to his apartment for a few minutes, while I waited outside. He told me when he came down that he had just talked with Taylor on the phone—at Taylor's home—and that we were to deliver some 'hype' to the latter."

"This was about 2 o'clock in the morning. We parked our car across the street from Taylor's bungalow court. There was a limousine at the opposite curb, with a driver at the wheel and the motor going. A woman was coming down the steps wrapped in a fur coat but I recognized her as ——— She passed Sands and me and got into the limousine hurriedly, and drove away."

Sands told me to wait for him on the sidewalk, while he went in with the bundle. He came back almost immediately and motioning me to step lively with him. As we left the curb I noticed a man in the bungalow court at the rear, adjoining Taylor's home open the shutters of a window and look out. I read in the papers afterward that this was Douglas MacLean's home."

"When we were in the car, Sands said to me: 'It's time to be going. The old man's got his. He's stretched out deader than a mackerel.' "We went downtown and separated. "Sands did not kill Taylor; I'm sure of that."

"I think Taylor was shot between 1:45 A. M. when Sands said he talked with him on the phone from Sands' apartment, and 2:30 A. M."

Henry Peavey, young negro who was Taylor's valet following the dismissal of Sands, was quoted Saturday in an exclusive United Press dispatch as to a quarrel he said he overheard between the famous director and a person prominent in the movies.

The quarrel, according to Peavey's story, occurred between 7 and 7:30 o'clock the night Taylor was murdered. The person named by Hefner as seen entering a limousine in front of Taylor's bungalow at about 2 A. M. was the same one named by Peavey as having participated in a bitter argument earlier in the evening.

Chicago, Jan. 6.—(U.P.)—A gangland torch murder gave police another problem in crime to solve today and their principal clues were some smoke-blackened keys, a handful of brass buttons, a man's cap and an automobile engine number.

The victim, a man about 25, had been shot through the head and beaten across the face with a heavy object before being thrust half inside his car, saturated with a can of his own alcohol and burned to death.

A desperate battle had preceded the murder, police deduced from a trail of blood that extended for several feet back of the car, which was standing on a lonely road two miles east of Steger.

Police deduced the man was a bootlegger, probably set upon by rival racketeers in an alcohol war.

GEN. GILCHRIST EXPRESSES HIS OPINION ON WAR

AUTHORITY ON WARFARE IS
CHIEF OF CHEMICAL SERVICE
OF WAR DEPARTMENT

IF A COMMANDER WANTED TO
DESTROY PUBLIC BUILDINGS
HE'D USE EXPLOSIVES

Washington, Jan. 6.—(U.P.)—Use of poison gas for wholesale destruction of non-combatants, which some scientists predict in the event of another war, would be "difficult and highly impracticable" in the opinion of Major General Harry L. Gilchrist, chief of the chemical warfare service.

Gilchrist's estimate of gas as the principal weapon of warfare was given to the house appropriations committee during closed hearings on the war department supply bill, made public today when the measure was reported to the house.

"I do not think there is any gas that will entirely destroy cities," Gilchrist told the committee. "So far as wiping out populations is concerned, I know of no gas, sufficient concentration of which could be placed, to destroy population of a city should any military commander be so foolish as to desire such a thing."

"If a commander wanted to destroy buildings, public works and factories, and kill as many people as possible, he would use high explosive—not gas."

San Francisco, Jan. 6.—Otis Hefner, missing key witness in the William Desmond Taylor murder mystery, was found today by the United Press.

Hefner is the man who former Governor Friend William Richardson said had revealed to him the name of the person who murdered the famous motion picture director in February, 1922.

He is believed to be the man to whom Buron Fitts, Los Angeles district attorney, referred two weeks ago when he said:

"We have reconstructed the scene of the killing and we have built an almost perfect case. Only one link remains to be filled."

Found by George E. Powers, a reporter for the United Press, Hefner repeated and amplified the disclosures made to the governor and the state prison board secretly in 1926, which resulted in his release from Folsom penitentiary to save his life.

These disclosures, intended by the governor for presentation to the Los Angeles grand jury, leaked out prematurely and, in the opinion of the state parole board, placed Hefner in danger of assassination at the hands of the dope ring in prison.

Found in civil life under another name, supporting his invalid wife and baby, Hefner answered these direct questions put to him by the United Press:

Q. Do you know anything of the murder of William Desmond Taylor?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know who committed the murder?

A. Yes.

Q. Who was it?

A. — (He named a motion picture celebrity).

Q. How do you know this?

A. I was mixed up along with Edward Sands, formerly employed by Taylor, in a narcotic ring in southern California. Sands was delivering dope to Taylor. The night Taylor was murdered I went with Sands to Taylor's house. We saw — leaving the premises, and a few minutes later Sands discovered Taylor's body.

Q. When was this?

A. About 2 A. M. February 2, 1922.

Q. Do you know any motive for the murder?

A. Yes. I heard direct threats against Taylor's life because he had turned "rat" and was informing on the dope ring. Also Sands told me that Taylor was in trouble because of his love affairs.

Q. Have you ever told this to officials?

A. Yes, in 1928, I made a full statement for Governor Richardson to Thomas M. Gannon and other officials of the state prison board and offered to appear before the Los Angeles grand jury.

Hefner, tall, lean and bronzed, asserted that since his release from Folsom penitentiary he had been attempting to re-establish himself as a good citizen.

"I'm still willing to go before the Los Angeles grand jury and tell what I know, to clear up this eight-year-old mystery," he said. I hope it can be done—if it is absolutely necessary—without subjecting my wife to humiliation, and sacrificing the place I've now won back by three years of hard work and no play. I don't want to be known as an ex-con. My new identity is clean. I've worked hard to make it so."

His statement in part made to the United Press and signed by him, follows:

"I came out of Texas, a green young fellow in my twenties, and got in with a bad bunch in southern California, primarily engaged in the dope racket. "One of these crooks was Edward Sands, who has ostensibly worked as a chauffeur and valet for William Desmond Taylor. Actually Taylor was distributing a lot of 'hype' to people in the movie business, including — (Again naming the person he asserted had committed the murder). "Word was passed around in this dope ring after awhile that Taylor had turned 'rat' and was tipping us off to federal officials. I heard several conversations in which it was remarked that Taylor would be bumped off if he didn't play square."

"On the evening of February 2, 1922, Sands and I were out at Redondo Beach on a job and saw Taylor — (naming two motion picture actresses) having dinner in a cafe.

"We went back to town and Sands went up to his apartment for a few minutes, while I waited outside. He told me when he came down that he had just talked with Taylor on the phone—at Taylor's home—and that we were to deliver some 'hype' to the latter."

"This was about 2 o'clock in the morning. We parked our car across the street from Taylor's bungalow court. There was a limousine at the opposite curb, with a driver at the wheel and the motor going. A woman was coming down the steps wrapped in a fur coat, but I recognized her as — She passed Sands and me and got into the limousine hurriedly, and drove away."

Sands told me to wait for him on the sidewalk, while he went in with the bundle. He came back almost immediately and motioning me to step lively with him. As we left the curb I noticed a man in the bungalow court at the rear, adjoining Taylor's home open the shutters of a window and look out. I read in the papers afterward that this was Douglas MacLean's home."

"When we were in the car, Sands said to me: 'It's time to be going. The old man's got his. He's stretched out dead as a mackerel!'"

"We went downtown and separated. "Sands did not kill Taylor; I'm sure of that."

"I think Taylor was shot between 1:45 A. M. when Sands said he talked with him on the phone from Sands' apartment, and 2:30 A. M."

Henry Peavey, young negro who was Taylor's valet following the dismissal of Sands, was quoted Saturday in an exclusive United Press dispatch as to a quarrel he said he overheard between the famous director and a person prominent in the movies.

The quarrel, according to Peavey's story, occurred between 7 and 7:30 o'clock the night Taylor was murdered. The person named by Hefner as seen entering a limousine in front of Taylor's bungalow at about 2 A. M. was the same one named by Peavey as having participated in a bitter argument earlier in the evening.

GEN. GILCHRIST EXPRESSES HIS OPINION ON WAR

AUTHORITY ON WARFARE IS
CHIEF OF CHEMICAL SERVICE
OF WAR DEPARTMENT

IF A COMMANDER WANTED TO
DESTROY PUBLIC BUILDINGS
HE'D USE EXPLOSIVES

Washington, Jan. 6.—(U.P.)—Use of poison gas for wholesale destruction of non-combatants, which some scientists predict in the event of another war, would be "difficult and highly impracticable" in the opinion of Major General Harry L. Gilchrist, chief of the chemical warfare service.

Gilchrist's estimate of gas as the principal weapon of warfare was given to the house appropriations committee during closed hearings on the war department supply bill, made public today when the measure was reported to the house.

"I do not think there is any gas that will entirely destroy cities," Gilchrist told the committee. "So far as wiping out populations is concerned, I know of no gas, sufficient concentration of which could be placed, to destroy population of a city should any military commander be so foolish as to desire such a thing."

"If a commander wanted to destroy buildings, public works and factories, and kill as many people as possible, he would use high explosive—not gas."

GANGLAND TORCH MURDER FOR CHICAGO TO SOLVE

Chicago, Jan. 6.—(U.P.)—A gangland torch murder gave police another problem in crime to solve today and their principal clues were some smoke-blackened keys, a handful of brass buttons, a man's cap and an automobile engine number.

The victim, a man about 25, had been shot through the head and beaten across the face with a heavy object before being thrust half inside his car, saturated with a can of his own alcohol and burned to death.

A desperate battle had preceded the murder, police deduced from a trail of blood that extended for several feet back of the car, which was standing on a lonely road two miles east of Steger.

Police deduced the man was a bootlegger, probably set upon by rival racketeers in an alcohol war.

CONFESSES HE MURDERED WIFE AND HER PARENTS

Ogden, Utah, Jan. 6.—(U.P.)—Delbert Green, 20, captured at his home here last night, confessed to police that he murdered his wife and her parents at Layton, Utah, early Sunday.

The triple murder, Green said, occurred after he and his wife had quarreled at their home here and the wife had left him to return to her parents.

Green said that after slaying the trio he had intended to "bump himself off" but that the gun he used jammed.

OVERWROUGHT BRAIN OF STUDENT LEADS TO MURDER

ALLAN R. SCHUMM, 17 YEARS OLD, SHOOT DOWN HIS FATHER

ST. LOUIS, MO., YOUTH THEN
SEVERELY WOUNDS HIS MOTHER

St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 6.—(U.P.)—Higher learning that beckoned to Allan R. Schumm, brilliant 17-year-old university student, as a pathway to a career of service in the medical profession, took a tragic tangent in his overwrought brain and drove him to shoot his mother and father on the last day of his holiday vacation, psychiatrists decided today.

An "obsession to kill" surged through him yesterday, young Schumm said. That obsession claimed the life of the father, William Schumm, 42, prominent lawyer and Mason, and resulted in serious injuries to Mrs. Fayette Schumm, 40, the mother.

"Do you believe in God?" the boy asked his father and mother upon summoning them from bed to the living room of their home after he had returned at 2 P. M. from a party.

"Certainly," replied Schumm. "I'm a Mason, naturally I believe there is a supreme being."

"Then pray," commanded the youth. As his parents stared at him in bewilderment, the son took a revolver from his pocket and began shooting.

The father staggered to a hallway and fell dead. The mother ran to the kitchen where her son pressed the weapon against her body and fired twice. Both bullets lodged in her hip.

She wrested the revolver from him, pulled the trigger until the chambers were emptied, and then ran to an apartment on the next floor.

Young Schumm then calmly telephoned Roy A. Surch, a family friend, and told him what he had done.

"You had better call a doctor," said the youth. "I am going now."

He then went to the Surch home where he was arrested.

The youth was held in the observation ward at the city hospital.

Champaign, Ill., Jan. 6.—University of Illinois friends of Allan R. Schumm, of St. Louis, knew him as a studious youth who stood high in his classes and was quiet in his manner, they said today.

Schumm lived at Newman hall dormitory. His brother, Arthur, a senior, lived in the adjoining room. Allan's roommate was Howard Frick of Marion, Ill.

Allan took little part in campus activities, his friends said.

Minneapolis, Jan. 6.—(U.P.)—Damage was set at $250,000, today from a disastrous fire that swept through several shops and destroyed a two-story building in the downtown district here Sunday night.

Several hundred firemen and all available equipment fought the blaze for five hours and for a time the fire threatened to get out of control. Hundreds of automobiles were marooned for hours and traffic was at a standstill for blocks in the Loop district.

City fire department officials said cause of the blaze was not determined.

VIGOROUS ATTACK IS MADE UPON COMMUNISM ISSUE

PRESIDENT WM. GREEN DE-
CRIBES AIMS OF LABOR
ORGANIZATION

LONG HERALDED SOUTHERN LABOR DRIVE

Charlotte, N. C., Jan. 6.—(U.P.)—Officials of the American Federation of Labor outlined a broad policy of labor and launched a vigorous attack upon "communism" at the opening of the southern labor conference here today.

President William Green was applauded frequently by 229 delegates from throughout the south as he delivered an address of nearly two hours in length, in which he described the aims of the A. F. of L. and scored its enemies.

Charlotte, N. C., Jan. 6. — Labor chieftains of the nation met here today with leaders of the movement in Dixie to launch the long heralded southern labor drive.

By vote of the last annual session of the American Federation of Labor, intensive organization of southern labor—especially in the textile belt of North Carolina—was ordered.

President William Green of A. F. of L. led the national leaders into Charlotte, while President T. A. Wilson of the North Carolina federation was in charge of the state delegation.

As the meeting got under way in the Charlotte hotel, the feeling prevailed that it forecast a possible major realignment of labor's affairs south of the Mason and Dixon line.

Throughout the textile belt for months there have been sporadic instances of disaffection among the workers, countered by assertion of mill operatives that radical organizers were responsible and not the existing labor conditions.

Bitterness leading even to bloodshed has been endangered. Six textile unionists were slain in a clash with deputy sheriffs at the gates of the Marion Mfg. Co. in October. Two other fatal clashes occurred at Gastonia.

Exact scope of the meeting today had not been intimated. It was understood, however, the convening chiefs would spend the major portion of the day perfecting a temporary organization. President Green was expected to sound a keynote.

The purpose of the conference, according to a statement issued by President Green in Washington, is to "map out a plan for organizing the wage earners of the south."

600 TONS OF STEEL, CONCRETE, TIMBERS FALL

ENDANGERED THE LIVES OF 28
WORKERS WHEN MASS FELL
IN ST. PAUL

DROPPED 20 FEET FROM ROOF OF 3RD STREET MALL
ON SUNDAY

St. Paul, Jan. 6.—(U.P.)—Workmen today began the gigantic task of clearing away the debris from more than 600 tons of steel, concrete and timbers that endangered the lives of 28 men, when it collapsed and fell 22 feet from the roof of the Third Street mall here Sunday.

The mall was constructed by digging away the banks of the Mississippi river and covering the huge excavation with a three-foot thickness of concrete. Only an hour's work remained when an entire section of the roof crashed down.

The collapse came without warning and 12 men fell with it while 14 others ran to safety. Firemen rescued the workmen who were trapped in the crash and several were taken to hospitals for the treatment of minor injuries.

J. W. Kelsey, city engineer, said he believed the collapse was caused by weakness of the pillars supporting the expanse of concrete and steel. Damage was estimated at more than $10,000.

BRAINERD 25 YEARS AGO

From the Daily Dispatch

January 6, 1905

Rev. Richard Brown, pastor of the First Congregational church has tendered his resignation to take effect March 5. He has been pastor of the church for something over a year and has made a large circle of friends.

Negotiations are pending whereby W. E. Brockway and Sam Parker will succeed to the business of M. J. Reilly, Seventh street grocer. This one of the oldest established grocery stores in the city.

Kenneth McDonald has been named as one of the doorkeepers in the senate during the session of the legislature now in session at St. Paul. Mr. McDonald held this position during the last session and as the body was organized on practically the same lines the appointive officers were filled as far as possible by the same parties who held them two years ago.

There is a change in the firm of E. Soloski & Co. clothing and pawnbrokers 508 Laurel street. Messrs. B. Soloski and R. Levant have bought out E. D. Stone and here after the firm name will be Soloski & Le. ant.

Manager C. A. Walker of the Brainerd Telephone Exchange has just issued a new directory which is neat and up-to-date.

Mrs. J. A. Carmichael arrived in the city this afternoon to visit a couple of weeks with her son, H. A. Carmichael and family.

The new Fitzer building, corner Eighth and Laurel streets, which is nearly completed is a model of modern perfection both from the point of arrangement and architectural design. It is understood that one of the store rooms in the building will be used for a drug store and that a new firm is going to locate here to engage in business. One of the store rooms will be used for a saloon.

The graduation exercises of the nurses training school connected with the N. P. Sanitarium will be held tomorrow evening in the nurses' building.

BRAINERD 25 YEARS AGO

From the Daily Dispatch

January 6, 1905

Rev. Richard Brown, pastor of the First Congregational church has tendered his resignation to take effect March 5. He has been pastor of the church for something over a year and has made a large circle of friends.

Negotiations are pending whereby W. E. Brockway and Sam Parker will succeed to the business of M. J. Reilly, Seventh street grocer. This one of the oldest established grocery stores in the city.

Kenneth McDonald has been named as one of the doorkeepers in the senate during the session of the legislature now in session at St. Paul. Mr. McDonald held this position during the last session and as the body was organized on practically the same lines the appointive officers were filled as far as possible by the same parties who held them two years ago.

There is a change in the firm of E. Soloski & Co. clothing and pawnbrokers 508 Laurel street. Messrs. E. Soloski and R. Levant have bought out E. D. Stone and here after the firm name will be Soloski & Levant.

Manager C. A. Walker of the Brainerd Telephone Exchange has just issued a new directory which is neat and up-to-date.

Mrs. J. A. Carmichael arrived in the city this afternoon to visit a couple of weeks with her son, H. A. Carmichael and family.

The new Fitzer building, corner Eighth and Laurel streets, which is nearly completed is a model of modern perfection both from the point of arrangement and architectural design. It is understood that one of the store rooms in the building will be used for a drug store and that a new firm is going to locate here to engage in business. One of the store rooms will be used for a saloon.

The graduation exercises of the nurses training school connected with the N. P. Sanitarium will be held tomorrow evening in the nurses' building.

W. B. A. Regular Meeting

W. B. A. regular meeting Tuesday, Jan. 7, at the Moose hall. Members please take notice in the change of hall and also the change of the date. Plans for installation will be made and would like to have all members present to make arrangements.

ATTENTION BROTHER ELKS

All Elks are requested to meet at the Elks Club Tuesday, Jan. 7 at 1:30 P. M. to attend the funeral of Brother Ben N. Anderson, in a body.

C. C. VAN ESSEN, Exalted Ruler.

Mrs. Philip Betzold who was in Minneapolis to attend the funeral of Nicholas W. Betzold, expects to remain in the Twin Cities for some time before returning to her home. Funeral services for Mr. Betzold were held on Monday from the Holy Rosary church, Minneapolis, and interment was made in St. Mary's cemetery. Mr. Betzold was of Muscatine, Iowa.

Members of the high school faculty who returned Saturday evening and yesterday to resume their duties at the new high school after spending the Christmas recess at their homes were Miss Mabel E. Dinner in a Diner

By JANE OSBORN

(Copyright.)

TO BEGIN with, Gregory Ives merely knew her as the girl with the blue hat. She commuted in a blue hat for months.

Gregory Ives read what he found worth while of the evening papers and got through a good many magazines besides, because from the time he left his office until he reached his house an hour and a quarter later he read whenever it was possible.

He reached the station a few minutes before train time and used the few minutes reading. Occasionally he would give a quick glance to see whether the blue hat was in sight. If he saw it moving toward the trainshed, then he knew that it was train time.

He would close his book or magazine and walk along thinking of what he had read, following the blue hat.

One evening when Gregory Ives was especially interested in an article in a scientific magazine he followed the blue hat without really thinking that it boarded the train on the right of the runway, whereas his train always made up on the left; and it was not until the train had drawn out of the great shed and was already going at a pretty good rate of speed that he noticed that except for the young woman in the seat opposite who wore the blue hat there were no familiar faces in the car.

Moreover, the conductor as he approached was none of those who usually punched his ticket.

"Guess I'm on the wrong train," said Gregory. "This doesn't stop at Arden, does it?"

"This is a through express," said the conductor. "We make a straight run without stop," and he mentioned a city that was three hours distant.

"Don't you stop at Arden even if there are passengers to get off there?" came a sharp query from across the aisle—the girl with the blue hat.

"No, we don't," said the conductor. "You used to stop there. You'll just have to get the engineer to stop tonight. I've got to get off there."

"Sorry, miss," said the conductor. "They may have stopped there on request once, but not for a year or two. And of course we can't make special stops."

"I think that's perfectly outrageous," said the girl as she fumbled in her purse to get the necessary carfare demanded by the conductor. Then, having collected fare from Gregory also, the conductor moved on.

"You thought we stopped at Arden, didn't you?" said the girl. "Well, I think if two persons could be mistaken like this, then the railroad company must be to blame."

"I got on because you did," said Gregory quite calmly.

"You followed me!" said the girl with low-voiced rage.

"I always do. It's convenient—not you, but your hat. Then I can go on reading or thinking."

"I should think you were excessively rude, if not a little crazy, to talk the way you have been talking," said the girl. "If it were not that I know who you are, You're Mr. Gregory Ives and I met you at a country club dance with my brother. He introduced you, but you have quite forgotten."

"Not at all," assured Gregory, leaning across the aisle. "Now that I see you I remember. You're Miss Ferguson, Max Ferguson's sister—Marcia, I believe. I merely knew your hat. Charming hat. You always wear something nice."

"Now I've told you why I got on this train. You haven't told me why you led me astray. I'm really rather curious."

"I was hungry," said Marcia simply. "It's corned beef and cabbage night at home and I hate it, and I had a very skimpy lunch. And—as I was coming along and looked into the dining car on this train I just was so hungry that I decided to hop on and have dinner on the diner and then get off at Arden."

"Well, are you hungry now? If you are, let's dine," said Gregory.

"You mean together?"

"I'm asking you to be my guest. Will your people be worried?"

"Haven't any 'people,'" said Marcia. "Brother and I live at the boarding house and he's away. They won't worry—they may talk, at the boarding house."

At one o'clock the next morning Marcia Ferguson rang the night bell of the boarding house where she and her brother boarded. She was let in by the owner of the establishment, to whom she offered no explanation.

Forthwith, Mrs. Prunes began to speculate and her speculation took an interesting turn when she learned from one of her boarders that she had seen a young man who looked like "that very brilliant and rather eccentric Gregory Ives" leaving Marcia at the front door. The boarder had seen him through her front window.

And so the gossiping began. And it became interested. Gregory Ives had been following Marcia Ferguson and she, the little mix, led him into the wrong train. Well, said Mrs. Prunes, when the engagement was announced, girls these days have to be pretty smart to get husbands.

Transportation Innovation

THE Northern Pacific railway is to meet motor truck and possibly bus competition by using the same kind of transportation to supplement its regular rail service.

The company has filed with the Minnesota secretary of state a certificate of incorporation of the Northern Pacific Transport Company, a Delaware corporation, through which the railway company is prepared to supplement and augment its steam freight and passenger service with highway motor service.

The transport company will file with the Minnesota Railroad and Warehouse Commission an application for permission to operate highway freight trucks along its lines between the Twin Cities and Duluth, thus initiating this augmented service. No regular schedules are proposed. The new service will be flexible, depending upon the amount of business. Primarily, it is intended to expedite through service and local service. Cars of less than car lot freight will be set out at strategic points where they will be met immediately by trucks for delivery to surrounding points. Only station-to-station service, however, will be performed. The number of stops in the through freight service, therefore, will be curtailed and through service speeded up. The trucks will meet the set-out cars at convenient points, and these may vary from day to day.

The company has no definite plans for further similar service on its system, but is prepared to expand when the necessity arises. No motor bus passenger service is proposed at this time. All of the stock of the Northern Pacific Transport Company is owned by the Northern Pacific Railway Company.

The United Press

AN idea of the value of United Press may be gained from the report that the New York Herald Tribune has added to its news resources the complete services of the United Press Associations. Thousands of correspondents in every state and nation thereby are added to the corps of writers and reporters serving the New York paper.

The Brainerd Daily Dispatch has leased wire service of the United Press received on printer-telegraph machines which run eight hours daily except Sunday from 7 a. m. to 3 p. m.

United Press Associations is a world-wide organization which gathers, writes and distributes news to newspapers in 41 countries or territories of the world. It maintains more than 160,000 miles of leased wires in the United States for distribution of its product. It has central offices or bureaus at leading news centers throughout the world, 46 of such bureaus in the United States. It utilizes daily all of the regular commercial telegraph, cable and wireless routes in transmitting its news from country to country, from continent to continent.

United Press is independent and non-exclusive. It has no alliance with any subsidized or governmentally controlled news agencies, but depends entirely upon its own sources for news from all parts of the world.

Ancient High School Gymnasium

GETTING into the new high school gymnasium is quite an undertaking when a crowd attempts entrance through a bottle-neck opening. A large group milled on the cold steps and sidewalk last Friday night. The pressure was partially relieved when a second entrance was opened and ticket selling started there too. It would not be a bad idea to have places down town where tickets will be put on sale and to have an entrance for the fans thus provided.

The Bemidji-Brainerd game drew an attendance of approximately 1100. The Crosby-Ironton game here this Friday will draw a larger crowd as the range team will bring hundreds of fans. At a recent football game in Brainerd, Crosby-Ironton had more range people in attendance than there were Brainerd people.

A little sand on the south walk would also not be amiss. With crowds running 1,000 and over, high school officials should make preparations to handle crowds expeditiously, permitting quick ingress and egress. To assist in handling crowds, the chief engineer and janitor staff of four can be deputized.

Let's have something done before Friday of this week.

Dark Arctic Night

PEOPLE wonder why so many planes are being mobilized in the Arctic to join in the search for the lost flier Ben Eielson and his companion and why so little flying is being done.

Winter holds the north in its frigid grip and the Arctic night is still ruling. In December, for instance, the sun makes only a perfunctory bow on the horizon and pops out of sight in a few minutes. The rest of the day is a period of twilight and then darkness. Conducting a search in a practically unmapped country, braving darkness, etc., is a supreme task. As spring comes, daylight advances apace. With June comes almost 24 hours of daylight. On the longest day of the year one may read newspapers in the open air.

At the South Pole spring is in the air and Byrd is making long flights because he is blessed with the daylight which enables him to photograph terrain.

THE research department of "Judge" has performed a most commendable public service. It has finally discovered what becomes of those people who live through a summer, saying, "It isn't the heat, it's the humidity." They are the ones who all winter keep telling you, "It isn't really so cold, it's the wind."

ST. LOUIS wants to erect a statue to Lindbergh. How unnecessary! Lindbergh is probably better known than any other American citizens of contemporary times and requires no marble memorial to call attention to his deeds.

THE movies in their ceaseless scurrying about for thrills to entertain their picture and talkie patrons, sometimes approach the deadline of peril and a slight slip spells disaster for the actors.

THAT man, Art Shires, talks as much as a regular fighter. To make a success of modern fighting it appears one must have as much command of language as fists.

NINETEEN fouls were called on Bemidji and nine on Brainerd in the basketball game here last Friday.

"STORM-TOSSED"

BY HELEN SCHERMERHORN YOUNG

ENID MONROE, young and pretty, has been loved since school days by Ned Grier and Dick Grant, boyhood chums. She favors Dick. After college, the two boys get jobs with an oil company. Ned is sent to Oklahoma while Dick goes to Shanghai. En route Dick stops in Paris to see Enid and her mother, who are vacationing there, only to learn they have left Paris. Next day he accidentally meets them. They had postponed their trip.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.)

CHAPTER IX.

MAISON. And a day almost spring-like—the softness of it.

It did seem like looking into their very lives; gowns which Josephine had worn; Napoleon's uniforms; their bedroom.

A stroll around the garden afterwards, while Mrs. Monroe waited for them near the entrance. She smiled when they came out to get into the car.

"Tonight we'll dine at the Ritz," Mrs. Monroe said, "and then we can go to the Casino de Paris."

"Yes," cried Enid. "I'm dying to go. You know, Dick, Chevalier is there."

"It's almost like New York here," Mrs. Monroe remarked when they had sat down to dinner that evening.

"We came to the right place to be with Americans," said Enid.

Dick had had a wonderful evening, but he had not had a moment alone with Enid.

He couldn't wait—he'd have to tell her. Perhaps there would be an opportunity tomorrow.

"Merry Christmas! Merry Christmas! Joyeux Noel! Joyeux Noel!"

The service at Notre Dame... Enid kneeling by his side... her face uplifted... Dick kneeling close to her. Would she some day kneel at his side at an altar in white satin? She lowered her eyes.

"It will be much cozier in our rooms," Mrs. Monroe said, as she invited Dick to Christmas dinner, "and since your train leaves at 8 we'd better have it at noon."

And Mrs. Monroe had provided a turkey and cranberry sauce. She'd been down the day before to talk to the chef herself.

"Now," Mrs. Monroe suggested while they sat over their coffee. "I'm going to lie down. Why don't you go out for a walk?"

Enid was out of the room before her mother had finished speaking. She was dying to be alone with Dick, to walk alone with him.

Back she came with her squirrel coat wrapped around her.

"We're off, Mummy," laughed Enid as she kissed her mother. "If Dick invites me I may take him to tea at the Pavillon Royale."

"Have a good time, dear. Good-bye, Dick."

Walking in the Bois with Dick, Dick shortening his long stride so that Enid could keep up with him, she longed to take his arm. He longed to take her in his arms.

But young people are shy—perhaps more shy when they are in love than at other times. And Enid had great dignity. Both were thinking of the night when Dick had kissed Enid; both were waiting for the moment when he could kiss her again.

They talked of everything except themselves. They laughed. Then they commenced walking more slowly. It was getting darker.

He wouldn't tell her now. They'd go some place for tea. When they were sitting quietly he would tell her that he loved her. He had no right now to ask her to be his wife—he was not well established enough as yet—but he could tell her that he was going to ask her. No. He wouldn't risk that. He'd ask her point blank to marry him. Couldn't run the risk of going to the ends of the earth and not being certain that she was his. They'd become engaged and go home and tell Mrs. Monroe.

"Let's get into this taxi, Enid, and go to that place you spoke of for tea," Dick said.

When he found himself in the seclusion of the taxi with the Bois darkening, he could resist no longer—he had to take her into his arms, kiss her, hold her close, feel those red lips on his.

And Enid? She was trembling; longing to feel his arms around her, to reach her arms around his neck and hear him say, "I love you." She knew he did; she knew he was going to say it.

Dick placed his big hand over Enid's head and whispered to her.

He turned in his seat and was just about to slip his arm around her slim waist when there came a crash, a fearful wracking of the cars, a grinding, the tearing of metal. Another taxi's axle had locked in theirs.

He tightened his hold on Enid, but the impact was so sudden and violent that her head had been knocked sharply against the metal upright of the car.

Her head fell back—she closed her eyes.

"I'm all right," she said. Arguments, excited taxi drivers, other cars stopping. For a moment Dick was in a daze.

Dick quickly called another taxi and took Enid home.

She sat quietly by his side, her hand in his, her eyes almost closed. He put his arm around her, and she laid her head back on his shoulder.

"My poor Enid," he whispered. She did not hear him—she had almost fainted.

"Don't let's frighten Mummy," she murmured, as they walked slowly along the hall of the hotel to her mother's apartment. "It would make her so nervous about me, and she'd never get in a taxi again. I'll just say I don't feel well and lie down."

That night Dick Grant took his train for Marseilles, having, however, assured himself that Enid was almost herself again. He went full of repressed longings. He had not been able to tell her of his love.

That night Enid Monroe cried herself to sleep.

Dick's travels—the scenes he passed through—served only to intensify his longing for Enid.

The journey to China was interesting, of course, to a young man making his first cruise. Aden was blistering, but its newness made him forget the heat. How could those British officers stick it out there for years? He saw some small boats which he was told were real pirate ships.

Singapore fascinated him. There he stopped over to attend to certain business. All the while he was seeing things through Enid's eyes and with her dear arm through his. He knew how he would hold her little hand in his big one as she slipped it through his arm when they would walk side by side.

He longed for her in Manila—to drive in one of those funny victorias with Enid by his side on a starlit night! That would be living. Lots of pretty girls in Manila, too. But none as beautiful as his Enid.

Shanghai. Shanghai meant real business. The oil company was one of the most powerful and influential organizations in China. He was soon caught in a treadmill of hard work, and his superiors were pleased that he did not spend his evenings at the Plaza, as most newly arrived young men would have done. For there are the so-called Russian refugees and many girls of the same brand Dick had seen at Zelli's in Paris.

Richard Grant, however, was there on business, and nothing was to interfere with it. He had a goal—to get ahead and propose to Enid.

In order to lead a more normal life and not get into the crazy whirl of jazz, Scotch and soda and unattached lady tourists looking for a thrill, Dick took a charming little house in the French concession which a comrade at the company was giving up. With the house he inherited the servants, two good Chinese boys who looked after him and made him very comfortable.

Occasionally he brought a friend home to dine and after dinner they sat on the veranda and smoked. Once in a while he was obliged to go to official dinners and parties at the Carlton or the Majestic—but there the American jazz made him homesick.

He joined the American Country Club, the Columbia, and and golf.

One day as Dick was teeing up at the seventh hole, some one gave him a resounding slap on his shoulder and said: "Well, I'll be darned!"

Ivor Drake it was. He had been a senior at college when Ned and Dick were freshmen.

"This is luck!" shouted Dick as they shook hands.

Ivor was a newspaper correspondent for the Amalgamated Press, had an itching foot and loved his job. The farther away he was ordered, the better he liked it and the better stuff he wrote.

"You must come out to my shack the first night you can, Ivor," said Dick, as they parted at the club. "How about tomorrow?"

"Can't make it tomorrow, old man, but the next."

He went to Dick's for dinner, and while the Chinese boys were bringing the cocktails and appetizers, Ivor looked around the room.

"Pretty soft," he said. "Now all you need is a Chinese wife. Sure you haven't one hidden behind that screen?"

They laughed, and Dick declared he didn't go in for that. He had a feeling of revulsion at the thought of it, with Enid waiting across the sea.

Ivor examined the screen which shut off the doorway leading into a bedroom and said it was very fine and that he would like to buy it on the way home.

"Screens always look suspicious and intriguing, don't they?" Ivor laughed and wound his long legs tighter around each other and twirled his close-cropped mustache.

"I wish you would go shopping with me some day," said Dick. "I want to get some presents to take home with me. What are some good things to take home?"

"Amber and jade."

"How about a fine Mandarin coat; one of those long embroidered ones?"

"Dick, now I know you have a girl—haven't you?"

"Well, she's not Chinese," and he blushed.

"What's Ned Grier doing?" asked Drake.

"He's with the company, too," Dick explained.

"Where is he now?"

"Oklahoma. He was sent there when I came here."

"That must be a jolt for him." "Says it's great experience. Fine crowd of fellows out there, and he's stuck all over a town called Ponca City. Says it's the liveliest place he's struck and, of course, he had a great deal of business in Tulsa, and that's a regular place."

"Give me his address. I've a young nephew going to college this fall, and I'd like you and Ned to write a letter to the fellows in the chapter—want them to look him over and if he's all right take him. You know the men there now, and I don't."

Dick gave Ivor Ned's address—a careless act that was to have a tremendous influence upon his life.

Transportation Innovation

THE Northern Pacific railway is to meet motor truck and possibly bus competition by using the same kind of transportation to supplement its regular rail service.

The company has filed with the Minnesota secretary of state a certificate of incorporation of the Northern Pacific Transport Company, a Delaware corporation, through which the railway company is prepared to supplement and augment its steam freight and passenger service with highway motor service.

The transport company will file with the Minnesota Railroad and Warehouse Commission an application for permission to operate highway freight trucks along its lines between the Twin Cities and Duluth, thus initiating this augmented service. No regular schedules are proposed. The new service will be flexible, depending upon the amount of business. Primarily, it is intended to expedite through service and local service. Cars of less than car lot freight will be set out at strategic points where they will be met immediately by trucks for delivery to surrounding points. Only station-to-station service, however, will be performed. The number of stops in the through freight service, therefore, will be curtailed and through service speeded up. The trucks will meet the set-out cars at convenient points, and these may vary from day to day.

The company has no definite plans for further similar service on its system, but is prepared to expand when the necessity arises. No motor bus passenger service is proposed at this time. All of the stock of the Northern Pacific Transport Company is owned by the Northern Pacific Railway Company.

"Now," Mrs. Monroe suggested while they sat over their coffee. "I'm going to lie down. Why don't you go out for a walk?"

Enid was out of the room before her mother had finished speaking. She was dying to be alone with Dick, to walk alone with him.

Back she came with her squirrel coat wrapped around her. "We're off, Mummy," laughed Enid as she kissed her mother. "If Dick invites me I may take him to tea at the Pavillon Royale."

"Have a good time, dear. Good-bye, Dick."

Walking in the Bois with Dick, Dick shortening his long stride so that Enid could keep up with him, she longed to take her arm. He longed to take her in his arms.

But young people are shy—perhaps more shy when they are in love than at other times. And Enid had great dignity. Both were thinking of the night when Dick had kissed Enid; both were waiting for the moment when he could kiss her again.

They talked of everything except themselves. They laughed. Then they commenced walking more slowly. It was getting darker. He wouldn't tell her now. They'd go some place for tea. When they were sitting quietly he would tell her that he loved her. He had no right now to ask her to be his wife—he was not well established enough as yet—but he could tell her that he was going to ask her. No. He wouldn't risk that. He'd ask her point blank to marry him. Couldn't run the risk of going to the ends of the earth and not be certain that she was his. They'd become engaged and go home and tell Mrs. Monroe.

"Let's get into this taxi, Enid, and go to that place you spoke of for tea," Dick said.

When he found himself in the seclusion of the taxi with the Bois darkening, he could resist no longer—he had to take her into his arms, kiss her, hold her close, feel those red lips on his.

And Enid? She was trembling; longing to feel his arms around her, to reach her arms around his neck and hear him say, "I love you." She knew he did; she knew he was going to say it.

Dick placed his big hand over Enid's and she responded to his.

He turned in his seat and was just about to slip his arm around her slim waist when there came a crash, a fearful wracking of the cars, a grinding, the tearing of metal. Another taxi's axle had locked in theirs.

He tightened his hold on Enid, but the impact was so sudden and violent that her head had been knocked sharply against the metal upright of the car.

Her head fell back—she closed her eyes. "I'm all right," she said.

Arguments, excited taxi drivers, other cars stopping. For a moment Dick quickly called another taxi and took Enid home.

She sat quietly by his side, her hand in his, her eyes almost closed. He put his arm around her, and she laid her head back on his shoulder.

"My poor Enid," he whispered. She did not hear him—she had almost fainted.

"Don't let's frighten Mummy," she murmured, as they walked slowly along the hall of the hotel to her mother's apartment. "It would make her so nervous about me, and she'd never get in a taxi again. I'll just say I don't feel well and lie down."

That night Dick Grant took her train for Marseille, having, however, assured himself that Enid was almost herself again. He went full of repressed longings. He had not been able to tell her of his love.

That night Enid Monroe cried herself to sleep. Dick's travels—the scenes he passed through—served only to intensify his longing for Enid.

The journey to China was interesting, of course, to a young man making his first cruise. Aden was blistering, but its newness made him forget the heat. How could those British officers stick it out there for years? He saw some small boats which he was told were real pirate ships.

Singapore fascinated him. There he stopped over to attend to certain business. All the while he was seeing things through Enid's eyes and with her dear arm through his. He knew how he would hold her little hand in his big one as she slipped it through his arm when they would walk side by side.

He longed for her in Manila—to drive in one of those funny victorias with Enid by his side on a starlit night. That would be living. Lots of pretty girls in Manila, too. But none as beautiful as his Enid.

Shanghai. Shanghai meant real business. The oil company was one of the most powerful and influential organizations in China. He was soon caught in a treadmill of hard work, and his superiors were pleased that he did not spend his evenings at the Plaza, as most newly arrived young men would have done. For there are the so-called Russian refugees and many girls of the same brand Dick had seen at Zelli's in Paris.

Richard Grant, however, was there on business, and nothing was to interfere with it. He had a goal—to get ahead and propose to Enid.

In order to lead a more normal life and not get into the crazy whirl of jazz, Scotch and soda and unattached lady tourists looking for a thrill, Dick took a charming little house in the French concession which a comrade at the company was giving up. With the house he inherited the servants, two good Chinese boys who looked after him and made him very comfortable.

Occasionally he brought a friend home to dine and after dinner they sat on the veranda and smoked. Once in a while he was obliged to go to official dinners and parties at the Carlton or the Majestic—but there the American jazz made him homesick.

He joined the American Country Club, the Columbia, and a golf.

One day as Dick was teeing up at the seventh hole, some one gave him a resounding slap on his shoulder and said: "Well, I'll be darned!"

Ivor Drake it was. He had been a senior at college when Ned and Dick were freshmen.

"This is luck!" shouted Dick as they shook hands.

Ivor was a newspaper correspondent for the Amalgamated Press, had an itching foot and loved his job. The farther away he was ordered, the better he liked it and the better stuff he wrote.

"You must come out to my shack the first night you can," said Dick, as they parted at the club. "How about tomorrow?"

"Can't make it tomorrow, old man, but the next."

He went to Dick's for dinner, and while the Chinese boys were bringing the cocktails and appetizers, Ivor looked around the room.

"Pretty soft," he said. "Now all you need is a Chinese wife. Sure you haven't one hidden behind that screen?"

They laughed, and Dick declared he didn't go in for that. He had a feeling of revulsion at the thought of it, with Enid waiting across the sea.

Ivor examined the screen which shut off the doorway leading into a bedroom and said it was very fine and that he would like to buy it on the way home.

"Screens always look suspicious and intriguing, don't they?" Ivor laughed and wound his long legs tighter around each other and twirled his close-cropped mustache.

"I wish you would go shopping with me some day," said Dick. "I want to get some presents to take home with me. What are some good things to take home?"

"Amber and jade."

"How about a fine Mandarin coat; one of those long embroidered ones?"

"Dick, now I know you have a girl—haven't you?"

"Well, she's not Chinese," and he blushed.

"What's Ned Grier doing?" asked Drake.

"He's with the company, too," Dick explained.

"Where is he now?"

"Oklahoma. He was sent there when I came here."

"That must be a jolt for him." "Says it's great experience. Fine crowd of fellows out there, and he's stuck all over a town called Ponca City. Says it's the liveliest place he's struck and, of course, he had a great deal of business in Tulsa, and that's a regular place."

"Give me his address. I've a young nephew going to college this Fall, and I'd like you and Ned to write a letter to the fellows in the chapter—want them to look him over and if he's all right take him. You know the men there now, and I don't."

Dick gave Ivor Ned's address—a careless act that was to have a tremendous influence upon his life.

Victor McLaglen, Edmund Lowe and Lily Damita in "The Cock Eyed World," Fox Movietone All Talking Pictures

Everyone remembers Captain Flagg and Sergeant Quirt, the hard-boiled Marines of "What Price Glory?" So vital were these two characters, so ably portrayed by Victor McLaglen and Edmund Lowe, that people everywhere immediately recognized them as two of the most vividly drawn characters ever seen on the stage or screen. And now comes the announcement that Flagg and Quirt are united again in "The Cock Eyed World," the Fox all-talking peace-time comedy sequel to "What Price Glory?" And this latest screen effort of Flagg and Quirt (McLaglen and Lowe) is, without doubt, robust, hilarious comedy, replete with thrilling adventures, momentary love-making, laugh-provoking situations and all those elements that make a picture first rate entertainment. And again Flagg and Quirt are pitted against each other. They fight, they love, the same girls, they engage in old fashioned horse play and in general are a riot from the opening scene to the last fadeout. To top it off, they bring to their latest efforts that same sincerity and convincing quality that distinguished their work in "What Price Glory?"

French actress, more vivaciously tantalizing than ever, is cast as the one woman who leads both these Leather-necks a merry chase. The manner in which she toys with both of them is a delight to behold. Miss Damita also sings the song hit of the picture, "Elenita," a charming ballad which she makes the most of. Two other songs are featured, "So Long," a Marine marching song, and "So Dear to Me," sung by Bobby Burns, one of the Marines. "The Cock Eyed World," is showing at the Paramount tonight, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Victor McLaglen, Edmund Lowe and Lily Damita in "The Cock Eyed World," Fox Movietone All Talking Pictures

Everyone remembers Captain Flagg and Sergeant Quirt, the hard-boiled Marines of "What Price Glory?" So vital were these two characters, so ably portrayed by Victor McLaglen and Edmund Lowe, that people everywhere immediately recognized them as two of the most vividly drawn characters ever seen on the stage or screen. And now comes the announcement that Flagg and Quirt are united again in "The Cock Eyed World," the Fox all-talking peace-time comedy sequel to "What Price Glory?" And this latest screen effort of Flagg and Quirt (McLaglen and Lowe) is, without doubt, robust, hilarious comedy, replete with thrilling adventures, momentary love-making, laugh-provoking situations and all those elements that make a picture first rate entertainment.

And again Flagg and Quirt are pitted against each other. They fight, they love, the same girls, they engage in old fashioned horse play and in general are a riot from the opening scene to the last fadeout. To top it off, they bring to their latest effort, that same sincerity and convincing quality that distinguished their work in "What Price Glory?"

And just to make everything complete, Lily Damita, the beautiful

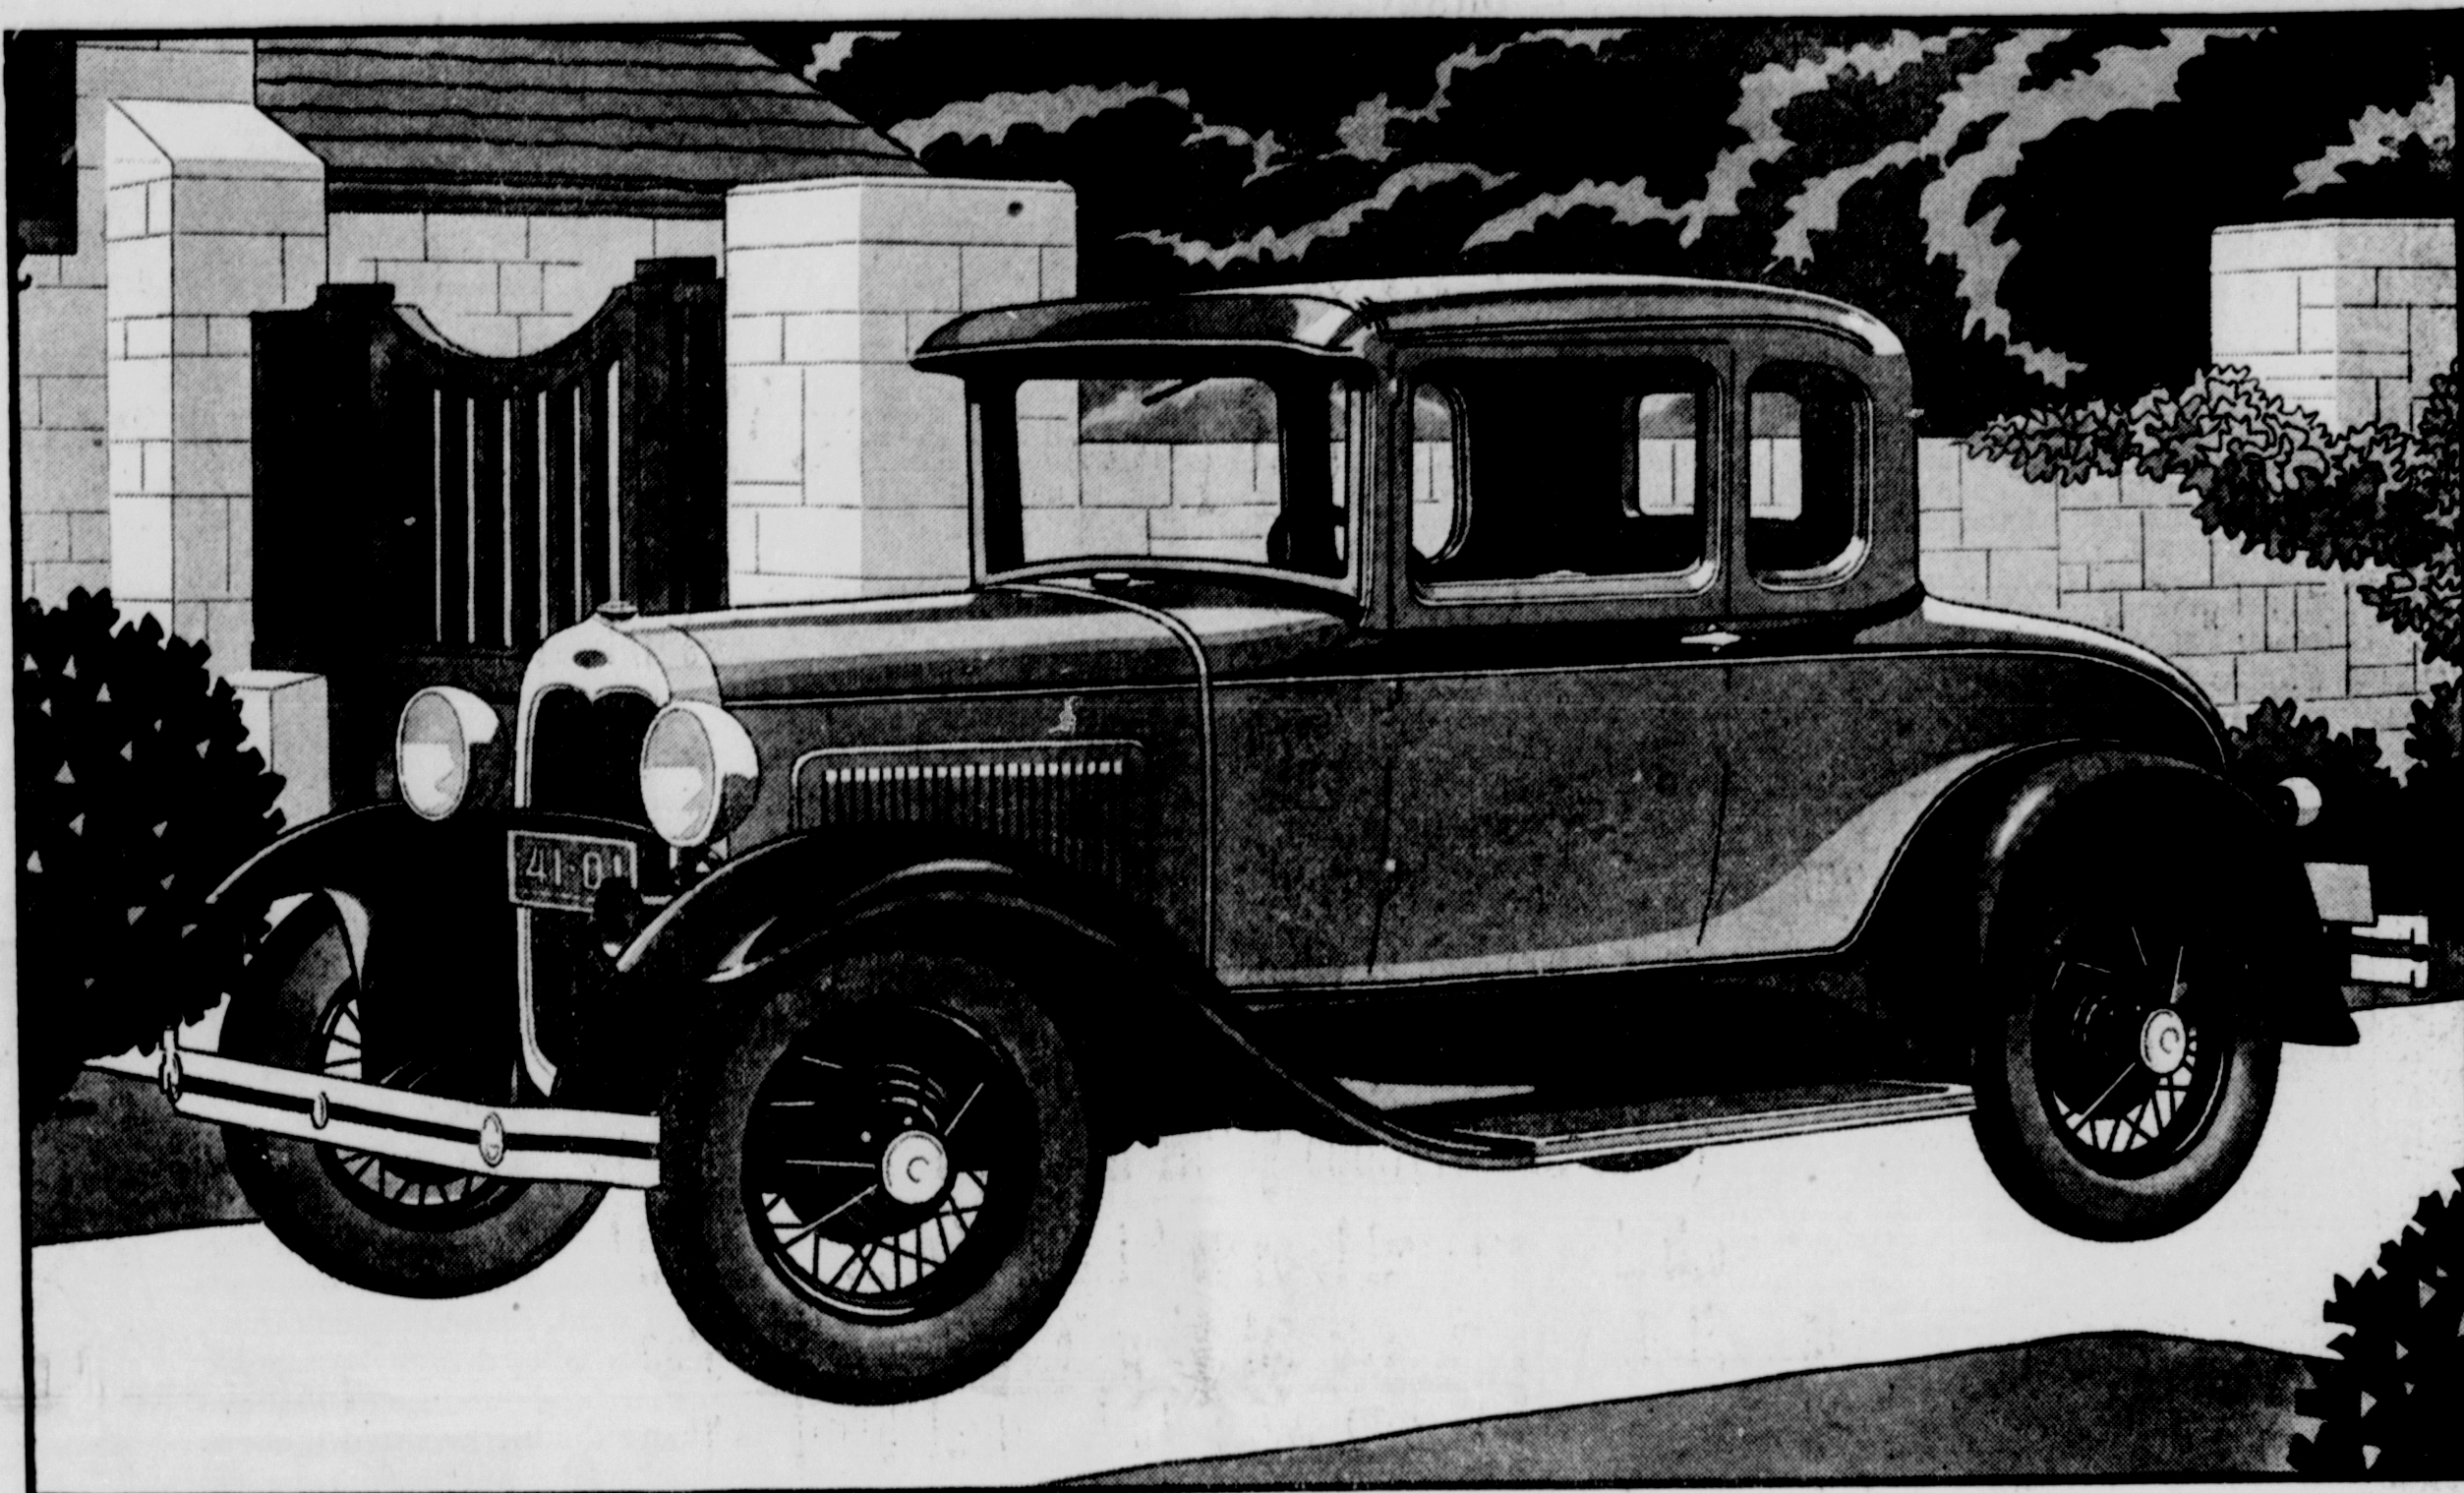

French actress, more vivaciously tantalizing than ever, is cast as the one woman who leads both these Leather-necks a merry chase. The manner in which she toys with both of them is a delight to behold.

Miss Damita also sings the song hit of the picture, "Elenita," a charming ballad which she makes the most of. Two other songs are featured, "So Long," a Marine marching song, and "So Dear to Me," sung by Bobby Burns, one of the Marines.

"The Cock Eyed World," is showing at the Paramount tonight, Tuesday and Wednesday.

New Beauty

FOR THE NEW FORD

THE NEW FORD COUPE

Flowing grace of line gives style and distinction to new, roomy Ford bodies. Now on display at dealers' showrooms

THE NEW FORD CARS, shown last Tuesday for the first time, have been enthusiastically received throughout the country. Everywhere it is realized that now, more than ever, the new Ford is a "value far above the price."

One of the distinguishing features of the new Ford bodies is the carefully planned harmony of every detail of design. From the new deep radiator to the tip of the curving rear fender there is an unbroken sweep of line—a flowing grace of contour heretofore thought possible only in an expensive automobile.

LOOKING at the new Ford you are impressed instantly by its smart style and compact, substantial sturdiness. For there is about it a certain character or personality which sets it apart and gives it a fresh and lasting beauty. You will take a real pride in this beauty just as you find a real thrill in the alert, capable performance of the car.

All of the new Ford bodies are finished in a variety of colors, with new striping and new streamline moulding. Interiors have more leg room. Closed cars have adjustable front seats. The smaller wheels, with larger tires, bring the car closer to the road, with a consequent gain in riding comfort and safety.

An additional feature of importance is the Rustless Steel used for the radiator shell, head lamps, hub caps, cowl finish strip and tail lamp.

This Rustless Steel will retain its bright, gleaming luster throughout the life of the car. It will not corrode, rust or tarnish in any kind of weather. Its brilliance is permanent. There is no plate to wear off, crack or scale, for it is the same bright metal all the way through.

The use of this Rustless Steel on the new Ford is a reflection of the enduring quality that has been built into every part of the car.

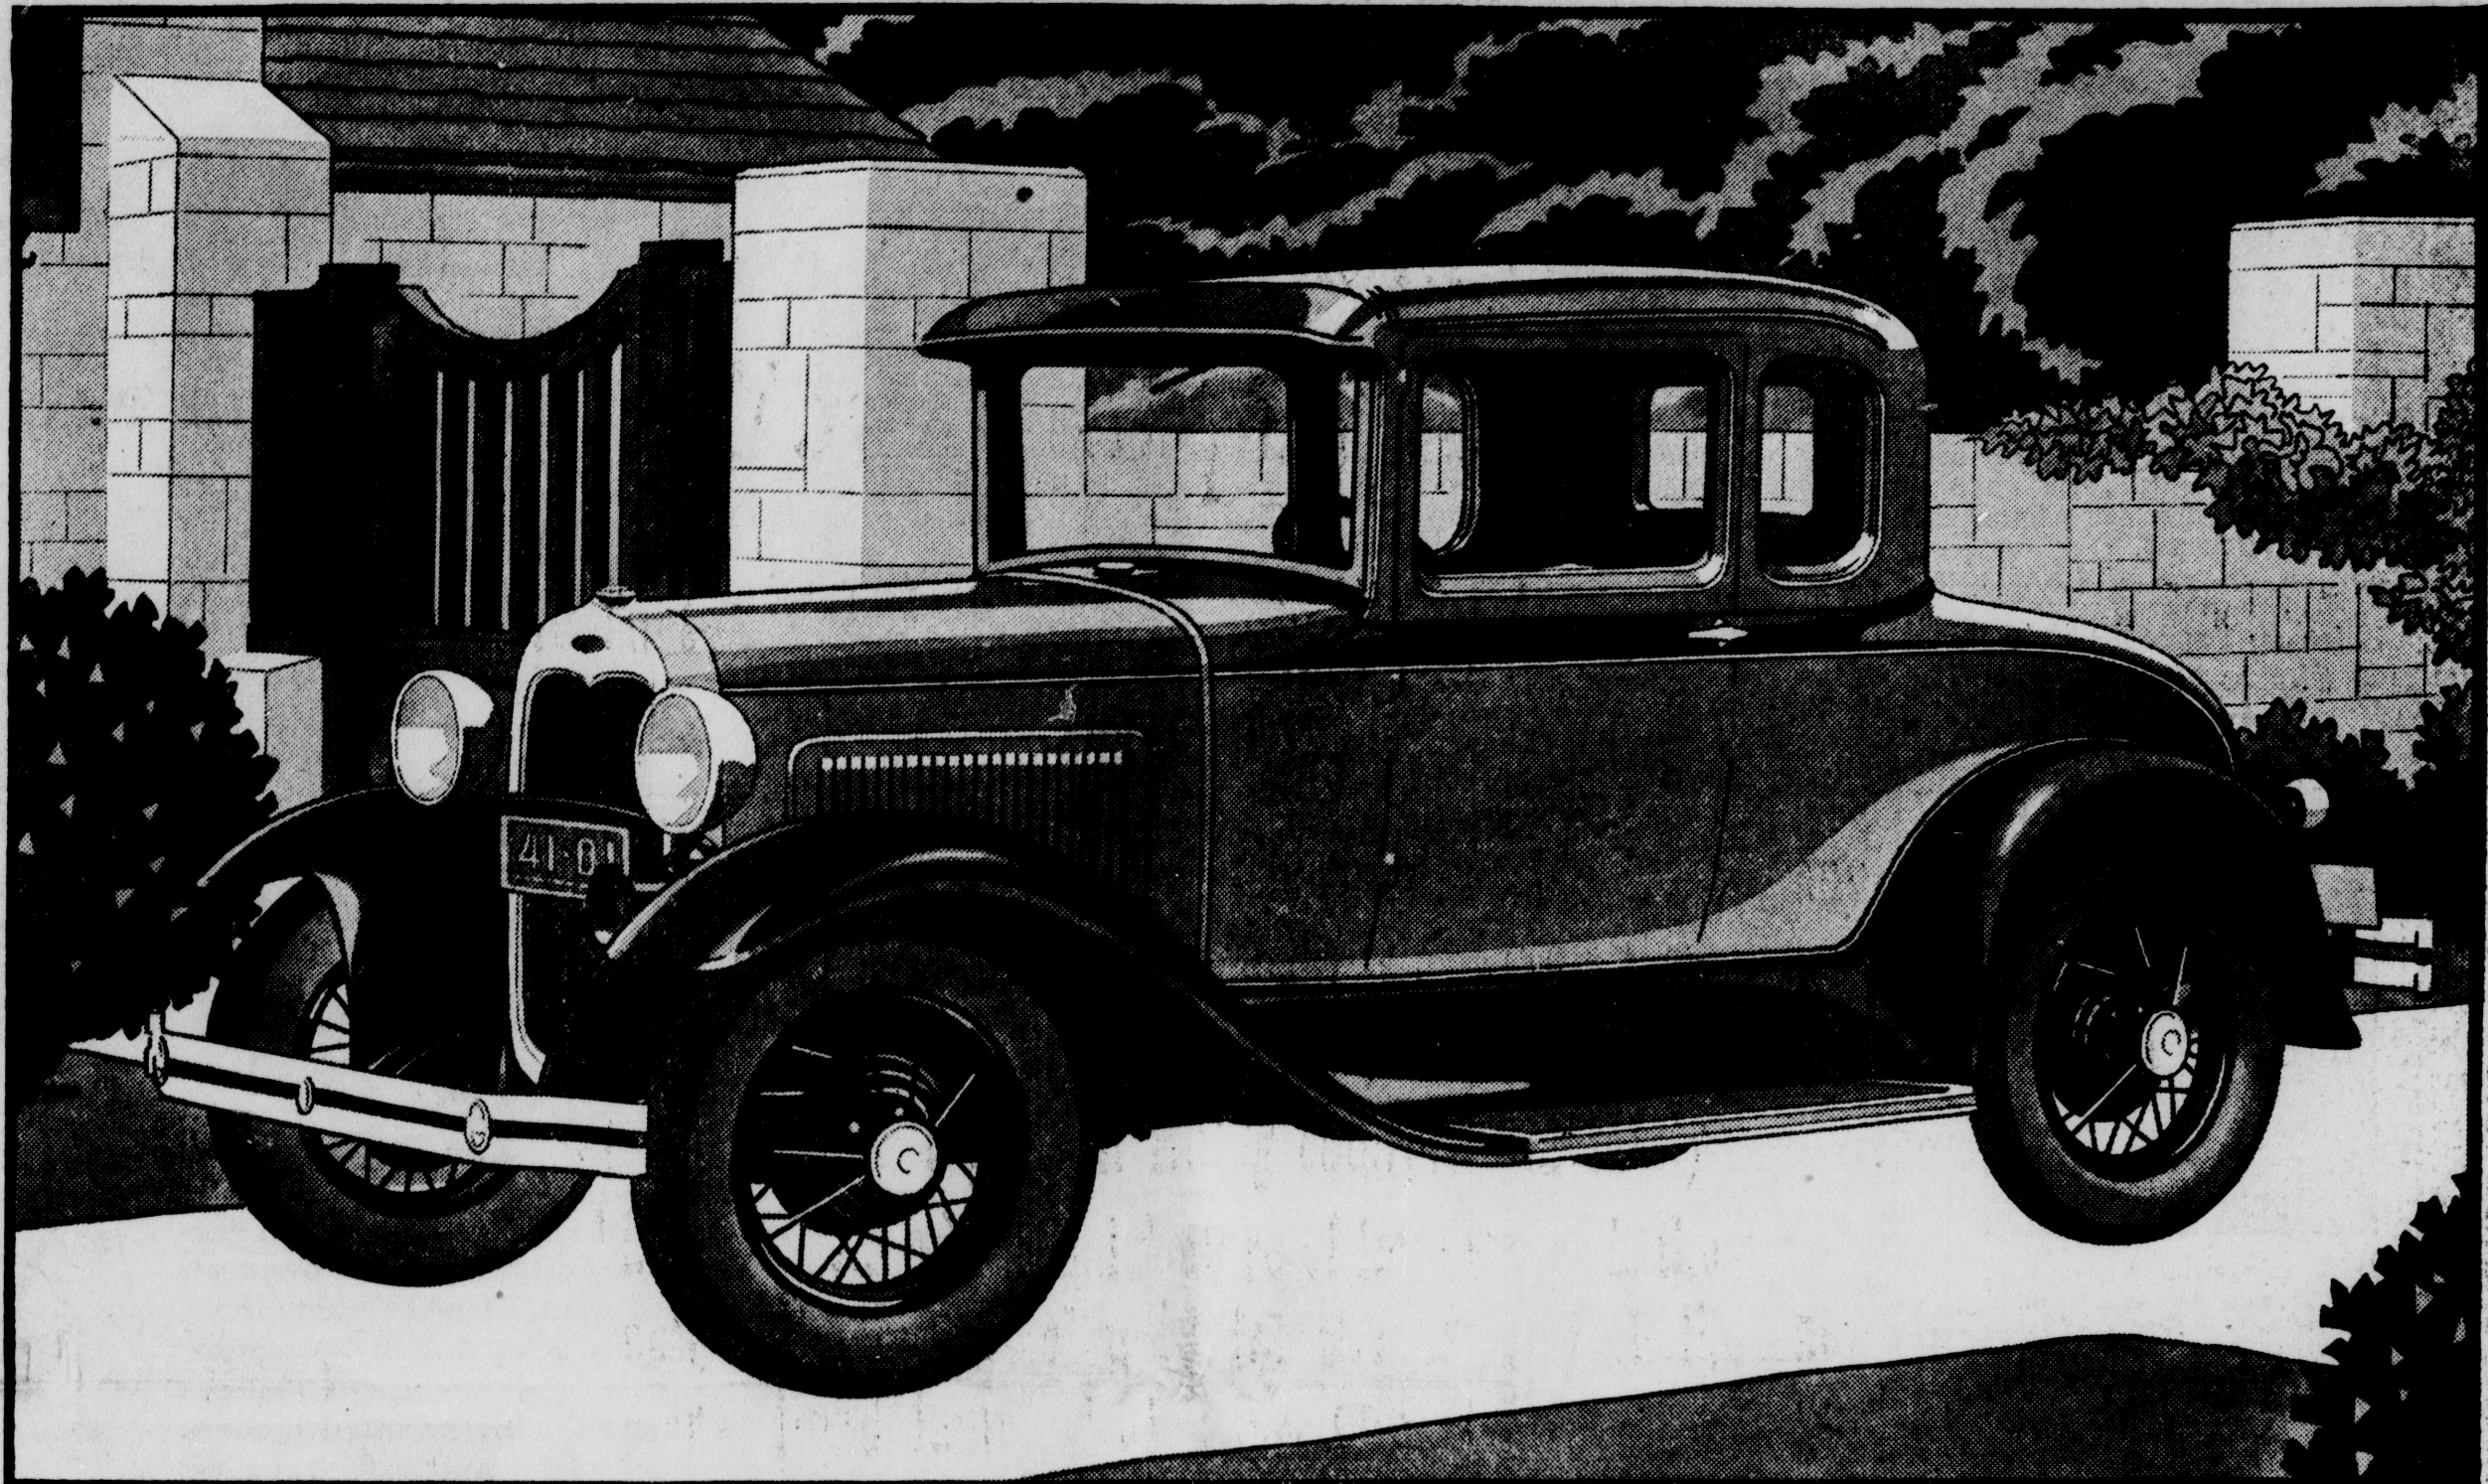

AT today's low prices the new Ford is unquestionably an outstanding value. Check it over feature by feature and you will see that it brings you everything you want or need in a modern automobile:—beauty of line and color . . . safety . . . comfort . . . speed . . . power . . . quick acceleration . . . ease of control . . . economy of operation . . . low up-keep cost . . . typical Ford reliability and long life.

BEN ANDERSON'S DEATH MOURNED

Former Brainerd Business Man and Active Citizen Passed Away at Fergus Falls

ILL ONLY SIX DAYS

Burial Rites to be Conducted at M. E. Church Tuesday at 2 P. M.

Bennie Nathaniel Anderson, former Brainerd business man, late of Fergus Falls, Minn., where he was in the clothing business passed away Sunday, January 5 at Fergus Falls at the age of 32 years and 8 months.

His death came quite suddenly and is a decided shock to his many friends who knew him in business, church, lodge and social affairs here and in Fergus Falls.

During his visit here within the past two weeks when he visited relatives and renewed friendships he appeared in good health and was optimistic over his future business career having recently accepted a partnership in the firm of Iverson and Lee, Fergus Falls, Minn.

His death followed an urgent operation and six days illness at the St. Luke's hospital, Fergus Falls.

Mr. Anderson devoted the majority of his years to the upbuilding of Brainerd, his birthplace, in a business and social way. He was born April 9, 1897.

He attended local schools and was employed at the John M. Bye Clothing Co. for nine years during which time he became a member of the firm. He was an active member of the Brainerd Lodge of Elks and the Carl Silvey Hanson Post of the American Legion. He transferred his memberships to the Fergus Falls organizations on his removal there one and a half years ago.

He was prominently active here also at the First Methodist church where he was a member of the choir and a leader in men's club work.

Mr. Anderson enlisted with the army during the World war on October 24, 1918, serving at Camp Forrest, Ga., until his discharge on December 28, 1918. The same year he was united in marriage to Miss Nell Foltz who with one daughter, Roberta survives him. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. P. T. Anderson predeceased him, his mother dying in 1922 and his father in 1925.

Four brothers and three sisters also mourn his death. They are: Mrs. Ira L. Tomlinson, Brainerd; Mrs. Fred Richter, Crosby; Mrs. Walter Peterson, Ft. Ripley, Route 1; Arthur T. Anderson, Cokato, Minn.; Oscar M. Anderson, Cross City, Florida; Albert O. Anderson, of the Brainerd Daily Dispatch, Brainerd, and Carl W. Anderson of the Brainerd Office Supply, Brainerd.

Brief burial rites were conducted this afternoon at Fergus Falls, pall bearers being: Henry Tomlinson, Burton Orne, Joseph Young, Mack Foss, O. M. Leonard, Henry Tomhave.

The body will be taken to Brainerd tomorrow morning and will lie in state at the M. E. church, North Sixth street, from 1 p. m. to 2 p. m. tomorrow when funeral rites will be held. Rev. F. A. Kufus, pastor of the church will officiate. Interment will be in the family plot at Evergreen cemetery. Pall bearers will be: Melvin Bredenberg, V. F. Anderson, Leonard Anderson, Art Benson, Ross Smith and Russell Fitzsimmons.

FOLLOWERS OF THE GLEAM

Mrs. E. P. Slipp in Charge of Devotionals Held at First Meeting After New Year's

The Followers of the Gleam held the first meeting of the year on New Year's Day. The meeting opened with all singing "Onward Christian Soldiers," Kathryn Albright accompanying.

In the absence of President Kathryn Carmichael, Mrs. Slipp took charge of the devotionals and Secretary Doris Geist read the reports of previous transactions and approved business matters.

During the study hour Chapter III of "Going to Jerusalem," was taken up, in which it was noted, "our English ancestors were men as savage as any anywhere, living in caves, dressed in the skins torn from the backs of wild animals, ancestors with bodies painted ferociously, their beards stained a gorgeous blue, the skulls of enemies dangling from their belts for drinking cups; no homes—no books—no alphabet. Our ancestors like that?"

The chapter closed with a review of what each country had received, from witnesses of Jesus Christ, it longed to pass to some other country, as follows:

A Jew carried the Bible story to Rome.

A Roman carried it to Gaul.

A Scotchman carried it to Ireland.

An Irishman carried it to Scotland.

A Roman carried it to England.

An Englishman carried it to Germany.

Another Englishman carried it to Scandinavia.

A Scandinavian king carried it back to England.

The social hour followed at which time pictures were cut in preparation for scrap-books for hospital needs. Refreshments were served by the hostess, Mrs. E. P. Slipp.

FIRE HITS GORHAM BUILDING TODAY

Damage Placed Over $2,000; Fire Sweeps Through Attic, Apartments Hit

STUDIO IS AFFECTED

Water Seeping Through Causes Damage, Firemen Fight Blaze One Hour

Fire, smoke and water caused damage to second story apartments and the Ten Thousand Lakes Studio in the amount of over $2,000 in a fire which broke out this morning in the studio building at 714 Front street. The damage is covered by insurance.

The alarm was telephoned in to the city fire department at 9:15 a. m. by W. W. Mackey of the Northern Pacific Railway freight office, who noticed smoke pouring from the roof. The fire is believed to have been started by sparks from the chimney. It swept through the attic before brought under control.

Apartments damaged were those occupied by Mr. and Mrs. James M. Gorham and daughter and Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Johnson. Considerable damage was done to the studio on the ground floor by water seeping through. A check of the damage is being made today by Mr. Gorham, owner of the building and studio.

The firemen placed out two lines of a total of 850 feet of hose. The fire was extinguished at 10:20 a. m. The studio will be open for business again tomorrow.

WOLF SLAIN AFTER 60 MILE CHASE OVER ICE

O. W. Van Doren Forced to Speed His Car up to 35 Miles an Hour to Overtake Wolf

FIRED SIX SHOTS

Operated Car With One Hand, Other on Rifle, Chase Takes in All Parts of Pelican

Travelling at a speed of 35 miles an hour, O. W. Van Doren, of Merrill, ran down and shot a large wolf on the ice at Big Pelican Lake Saturday after a two hour chase.

Covering practically every section of the ice covered lake to prevent the wolf from escaping into the adjoining woods, Van Doren maneuvered his "fiver" into a position beside the racing wolf and shot him.

Unable to use both his hands in firing, Van Doren shot six times from his .32 calibre rifle, one hand on the wheel of his car and the other directing the gun. The sixth shot took effect and brought the animal down. Van Doren has collected the $15 bounty money on the wolf at the office of the county auditor.

Mr. Van Doren first saw the wolf on the ice while driving along the road to the east adjoining the lake. He started pursuit and was forced to speed his car to 35 miles an hour to keep the wolf from outdistancing him. After an hour and a half chase over the ice the wolf tired and slacked its pace so that the driver had his car going 25 miles an hour. Mr. Van Doren estimated that he travelled about 60 miles before slaying the animal. He was alone during the experience.

FIRST USE OF THE AUDITORIUM BY THE HIGH SCHOOL TODAY

First use of the auditorium today was made by the whole high school today when all pupils assembled there this morning and listened to talks made by Supt. W. C. Cobb and Principal Miss Mary Tornstrom.

The acoustics of the hall were given a test when Hallett Clarkson officiated as cheer leader.

Small Blaze in Ransford

Damage to one room in the Ransford hotel was caused by a small blaze that broke out Saturday night at 11:35 o'clock. The flames were checked before they spread. Hotel employees and firemen joined in extinguishing the blaze.

Hotel officials said the fire was caused by a cigarette left burning on a dresser.

WEEK OF PRAYER

Presbyterian Church Joins With All Christian Churches in Its Observance

The First Presbyterian church has joined with all Christian churches in the observance of the Week of Prayer January 5 to 12. The pastor, the Rev. Alexander G. Patterson, will lead the congregation in the study of John's Gospel. The book unlocks life and opens the way to a better year.

Services are held Sundays at 10:30 A. M. and 7:45 P. M. and week evenings at 7:45 o'clock. These meetings have attracted much attention in other years and the attendance has been excellent. The messages are for the times we are living in and the results are gratifying, said the pastor.

1929 FIRES IN CITY TOTAL 116

Damage Much Less Than in Year Previous When Department Answered 130 Alarms

Fire Chief Frank Fuller reported today that the department answered 116 alarms during the year 1929, four less than the number for the year previous.

The year 1928 had a heavier fire damage than last year due to the loss of the high school.

Outstanding fires of 1929 were the third story, attic and roof blaze in the Iron Exchange building and the fire in the west section of the Ransford hotel.

No lives were lost or severe injuries caused in fighting the fires during the past year.

ODD FELLOWS CHRISTMAS PARTY

75 Children and 50 Adults Gather at Hall on Saturday Evening

Seventy-five children and 50 adults gathered at the Odd Fellows hall on Saturday evening for the Odd Fellow Christmas party given for the children.

At 8 o'clock a short program was given in which a number of the children recited Christmas pieces which they had learned. Joe Swindell of Northeast Brainerd gave a number of readings and several songs and Donagan Olson gave a few piano selections.

Following the program games were enjoyed by the children. The games were in charge of Mrs. Walter M. Murphy. Santa Claus was there and handed each child a present taken from under the prettily decorated Christmas tree. Each child was given a generous bag of candy and nuts, also apples. Arrangements were in charge of Arthur Ohms and J. W. Fry. The hall had been trimmed with the holiday decorations lending a festive atmosphere, and a most pleasant evening was enjoyed.

Mr. Anderson enlisted with the army during the World war on October 24, 1918, serving at Camp Forrest, Ga., until his discharge on December 28, 1918. The same year he was united in marriage to Miss Nell Foltz who with one daughter, Roberta survives him. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. P. T. Anderson predeceased him, his mother dying in 1922 and his father in 1925.

Four brothers and three sisters also mourn his death. They are: Mrs. Ira L. Tomlinson, Brainerd; Mrs. Fred Richter, Crosby; Mrs. Walter Peterson, Ft. Ripley; Route 1; Arthur T. Anderson, Kokato, Minn.; Oscar M. Anderson, Cross City, Florida; Albert O. Anderson, of the Brainerd Daily Dispatch, Brainerd; and Carl W. Anderson, of the Brainerd Office Supply, Brainerd.

Brief burial rites were conducted this afternoon at Fergus Falls, pall bearers being: Henry Tomlinson, Burton Orne, Joseph Young, Mack Foss, O. M. Leonard, Henry Tomhave.

The body will be taken to Brainerd tomorrow morning and will lie in state at the M. E. church, North Sixth street from 1 p. m. to 2 p. m. tomorrow when funeral rites will be held. Rev. F. A. Rufus, pastor of the church will officiate. Interment will be in the family plot at Evergreen cemetery. Pall bearers will be: Melvin Brenden, V. F. Anderson, Leonard Anderson, A. Benson, Ross Smith and Russell Fitzsimmons.

FOLLOWERS OF THE GLEAM

Mrs. E. P. Slipp in Charge of Devotionals Held at First Meeting After New Year's

The Followers of the Gleam held the first meeting of the year on New Year's Day. The meeting opened with all singing "Onward Christian Soldiers," Kathryn Albright accompanying.

In the absence of President Kathryn Carmichael, Mrs. Slipp took charge of the devotionals and Secretary Doris Geist read the reports of previous transactions and approved business matters.

During the study hour Chapter III of "Going to Jerusalem," was taken up, in which it was noted, "our English ancestors were men as savage as any anywhere, living in caves, dressed in the skins torn from the backs of wild animals, ancestors with bodies painted ferociously, their beards stained a gorgeous blue, the skulls of enemies dangling from their belts for drinking cups; no homes—no books—no alphabet. Our ancestors like that?"

The chapter closed with a review of what each country had received, from witnesses of Jesus Christ, it longed to pass to some other country, as follows:

A Jew carried the Bible story to Rome.
A Roman carried it to Gaul.
A Scotchman carried it to Ireland.
An Irishman carried it to Scotland.
A Roman carried it to England.
An Englishman carried it to Germany.

Another Englishman carried it to Scandinavia.

A Scandinavian king carried it back to England.

The social hour followed at which time pictures were cut in preparation for scrap-books for hospital needs. Refreshments were served by the hostess, Mrs. E. P. Slipp.

FIRE HITS GORHAM BUILDING TODAY

Damage Placed Over $2,000; Fire
Sweeps Through Attic,
Apartments Hit

STUDIO IS AFFECTED

Water Seeping Through Causes
Damage, Firemen Fight Blaze
One Hour

Fire, smoke and water caused damage to second story apartments and the Ten Thousand Lakes Studio in this amount of over $2,000 in a fire which broke out this morning in the studio building at 714 Front street. The damage is covered by insurance.

The alarm was telephoned in to the city fire department at 9:15 a. m. by W. W. Mackey of the Northern Pacific Railway freight office, who noticed smoke pouring from the roof. The fire is believed to have been started by sparks from the chimney. It swept through the attic before brought under control.

Apartments damaged were those occupied by Mr. and Mrs. James M. Gorham and daughter and Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Johnson.

Considerable damage was done to the studio on the ground floor by water seeping through. A check of the damage is being made today by Mr. Gorham, owner of the building and studio.

The firemen placed out two lines of a total of 850 feet of hose. The fire was extinguished at 10:20 a. m. The studio will be open for business again tomorrow.

WOLF SLAIN AFTER 60 MILE CHASE OVER ICE

O. W. Van Doren Forced to Speed His Car up to 35 Miles an Hour to Overtake Wolf

FIRE SIX SHOTS

Operated Car With One Hand, Other
on Rifle, Chase Takes in All Parts of Pelican

Travelling at a speed of 35 miles an hour, O. W. Van Doren, of Merrifield, ran down and shot a large wolf on the ice at Big Pelican Lake Saturday after a two hour chase.

Covering practically every section of the ice covered lake to prevent the wolf from escaping into the adjoining woods, Van Doren maneuvered his "diver" into a position beside the racing wolf and shot him.

Unable to use both his hands in firing, Van Doren shot six times from his .32 calibre rifle, one hand on the wheel of his car and the other directing the gun. The sixth shot took effect and brought the animal down. Van Doren has collected the $15 bounty money on the wolf at the office of the county auditor.

Mr. Van Doren first saw the wolf on the ice while driving along the road to the east adjoining the lake. He started pursuit and was forced to speed his car to 35 miles an hour to keep the wolf from outdistancing him. After an hour and a half chase over the ice the wolf tired and slacked his pace so that the driver had his car going 25 miles an hour. Mr. Van Doren estimated that he travelled about 60 miles before slaying the animal. He was alone during the experience.

FIRST USE OF THE AUDITORIUM BY THE HIGH SCHOOL TODAY

First use of the auditorium was made by the whole high school today when all pupils assembled there this morning and listened to talks made by Supt. W. C. Cobb and Principal Miss Mary Tornstrom.

The acoustics of the hall were given a test when Hallett Clarkson officiated as cheer leader.

Small Blaze in Ransford

Damage to one room in the Ransford hotel was caused by a small blaze that broke out Saturday night at 11:35 o'clock. The flames were checked before they spread. Hotel employees and firemen joined in extinguishing the blaze.

Hotel officials said the fire was caused by a cigarette left burning on a dresser.

WEEK OF PRAYER

Presbyterian Church Joins With All
Christian Churches in Its Observance

The First Presbyterian church has joined with all Christian churches in the observance of the Week of Prayer January 5 to 12. The pastor, the Rev. Alexander G. Patterson, will lead the congregation in the study of John's Gospel. The book unlocks life and opens the way to a better year.

Services are held Sundays at 10:30 A. M. and 7:45 P. M. and week evenings at 7:45 o'clock. These meetings have attracted much attention in other years and the attendance has been excellent. The messages are for the times we are living in and the results are gratifying, said the pastor.

BY COLLECTOR IN ROCK-
FORD OIL STATION

Rockford, Ill., Jan. 6. — (UP) — Allyn Britting, 28, Brainerd, Minn., pilot, was suffering slightly today from a bullet wound received accidentally here Saturday night.

Britting was wounded in the chin by a bullet from a revolver in the hands of Constable P. S. French, an oil company collector who was in the wash room of an oil station when the gun was discharged.

The bullet crashed through two doors and cut a furrow in the pilot's chin, narrowly missing the jugular vein.

Damage Much Less Than in Year
Previous When Department
Answered 120 Alarms

Fire Chief Frank Fuller reported today that the department answered 116 alarms during the year 1929, four less than the number for the year previous.

The year 1928 had a heavier fire damage than last year due to the loss of the high school.

Outstanding fires of 1929 were the third story, attic and roof blaze in the Iron Exchange building and the fire in the west section of the Ransford hotel.

No lives were lost or severe injuries caused in fighting the fires during the past year.

LECTURES TONIGHT

Prof. Keith Clark of Carleton College to Speak at Elks Temple This Evening

This evening at the Elks Temple at 8 o'clock the Literary Section of the Brainerd Musical club will present Prof. Keith Clark of the department of history and political science of Carleton College, who will speak on Canadian-American relations of today. There will be no charge for admission, and all members of the Brainerd Musical club may bring their husbands or friends, and it is hoped a good number will be in attendance.

Miss Clark, who thinks the dramatic situations between nations more interesting than the drama wherein people act, comes to Brainerd well recommended. She is giving a number of lectures throughout Minnesota during the winter on "The United States of America and South America" and "American-Canadian relations."

Miss Clark has been distinguished as a woman for her work in the field of political science. She returned recently from the East where she attended several important receptions, including one for Premier Ramsay MacDonald. She has made a special study in the field of international law, and was abroad for two years during the war, and those who attend this evening may be assured of an interesting and educational lecture.

ODD FELLOWS CHRISTMAS PARTY

75 Children and 50 Adults Gather at Hall on Saturday Evening

Seventy-five children and 50 adults gathered at the Odd Fellows hall on Saturday evening for the Odd Fellow Christmas party given for the children.

At 8 o'clock a short program was given in which a number of the children recited Christmas pieces which they had learned. Joe Swindell of Northeast Brainerd gave a number of readings and several songs and Donagan Olson gave a few piano selections.

Following the program games were enjoyed by the children. The games were in charge of Mrs. Walter M. Murphy. Santa Claus was there and handed each child a present taken from under the prettily decorated Christmas tree. Each child was given a generous bag of candy and nuts, also apples. Arrangements were in charge of Arthur Ohms and J. W. Fry. The hall had been trimmed with the holiday decorations lending a festive atmosphere, and a most pleasant evening was enjoyed.

BOXING GAME SLIDES INTO MEDIOCRITY

INEFFICIENCY SHOWN BY PRESENT SPORT PROMOTERS

PRESENT HEADS OF MADISON SQUARE GARDEN ARE BEWILDERED

TEX RICKARD, HAD HE LIVED, WOULD HAVE HAD A HEAVY-WEIGHT CHAMPION

By FRANK GETTY
(United Press Sports Editor)

New York, Jan. 6.—One year ago today the world of fistfuffs lost its most important and entertaining figure when Tex Rickard died at Miami Beach.

The year that has passed has seen the boxing game in which the late promoter was so preeminently successful, plunged into the doldrums of mediocrity. Those who succeeded Rickard in this modern "racket," managers who respected Tex, or at least feared and "played ball" with him, now have the present heads of Madison Square Garden running bewilderedly in circles.

Had Rickard lived, he would have a heavyweight champion today, and that would be something. It is also more than likely that the inertia in the other divisions would not exist. The master showman had been seen to that.

There is some ground for belief, however, that Tex Rickard had reached the crest of his success shortly before his sudden death and that if he had lived he might have seen his more amazing dream castles tumble to earth around him. As a promoter of boxing, he was without a peer, but Tex had dreamed of other ventures, a sporting paradise in Florida, race tracks and gambling casinos, amusement piers and real estate developments.

The wreckage of Rickard's dreams can be seen today, darkened windows and sheriff's padlocks, crumbling skeletons of steel that were never completed, mortgages over everything Mrs. Rickard, the young widow, who carried Rickard when he was practically a millionaire, is living today in seclusion in a modest apartment at Miami Beach, trying to sell the house which Rickard had remodelled and refurnished for her by the waters of Biscayne Bay. The millionaires whom Tex was too proud to call his customers still play luxuriantly in the Florida sunshine, but when the promoters' assets were tallied there was next to nothing left for his widow and small daughter.

Rickard's successors are trying to arrange a bout to be held at Miami in February, and unless their bewilderment is their idea of publicity they are cutting rather poor figures. Last year's fight, arranged by Tex and carried through with the assistance of the glowing personality of Jack Dempsey, was a success from a financial point of view. This year's, if they have one at all, which is doubtful, is not going to be anything of the sort. It took the imagination, fertile and daring, of Texas Rickard, to organize the fight game to its glamorous peak of 1927. It took Rickard's shrewd, suspicious mentality to keep the grasping parasites of managers who infest the sport from ruining it.

Boxing never has missed an individual as much as Tex Rickard has been missed during the past year.

WARD BASKETEERS LOSE TO MORRIS CO. K FIVE, 36-20

UNABLE TO OVERCOME LEAD ESTABLISHED BY DOWNSIDE QUINT IN FIRST HALF

PLAY THE CROSBY RANGERS AT IRONTON WEDNESDAY; RETURN GAME WITH MORRIS

Unable to cope with the fast breaking attack displayed by the Company K five of Morris during the first half, the Brainerd Montgomery Ward quintet lost a fast basketball game 36-20 at the downtown city yesterday afternoon. During the second half, with a changed line-up, the Ward team was able to hold the Morris team on even terms, but Morris had piled up a sufficient lead during the first half to clinch the contest. The score at the half was 24-10.

Considering the 125-mile trip to Morris with only an hour and a half to rest before the game started, Captain Nelson was well satisfied with the showing his team made. Marshall and Marlin led the Brainerd offense, the former connecting for four short field goals and the latter sinking three long shots from past the center of the large Morris floor. Etters, floor guard, and Boswell, center, were the main cogs in the Company K attack. Eckholm and Heikinen started the game at forwards for Wards, with Marshall at center, and Captain Nelson and Swanson, guards. At the beginning of the second half Marlin was sent in at center to control the tip-off for Brainerd. Marshall was sent back to the guard position with Captain Nelson and Eckholm and Heikinen continued at the forward posts. This lineup proved effective and Manager Gulden stated this morning that this combination would probably start against the Crosby Rangers Wednesday evening without further experimenting.

The Ward five is anxious for the return game with Morris which will be played here soon. The next game on the Ward schedule will be played with the Crosby Rangers Wednesday evening at the Ironton school, the game starting at 8 o'clock. The team will hold a practice in the new high school gym before taking on the Range five and expect to be in good condition for a hard game.

STAR GUARD, DON BONDY, INELIGIBLE BECAUSE OF FAILURE IN STUDIES

CUTS DOWN GOPHER OFFENSIVE AND DEFENSIVE POWER CONSIDERABLY

Minneapolis, Jan. 6.—Lacking the services of Don Bondy, star guard, the University of Minnesota basketball team opens its conference campaign against a veteran Michigan quint here tonight.

Bondy was declared ineligible because of a scholastic failure and his absence, Coach Dave MacMillan declared, will considerably cut down the Gophers' offensive and defensive power. His place in the line-up probably will be taken by Fred Karner or Harry Schoening, both sophomores. Michigan will be presented by practically the same team that tied with Wisconsin for the western conference championship last year. Three sophomores will be included in the Gopher lineup and only one man, Wallie Norgard, center, was a regular last season.

Coach MacMillan is expected to start Sommer and Looat at the forwards, Norgard at center, Gader and either Karner or Schening at guards.

The Michigan line-up will have Truskowski and Daniels, forwards, Chapman, center, and Orwig and Kanitz, guards.

SOLO-HOLDUP IN SOFT DRINK PARLOR

New Ulm, Jan. 6.—(UP)—An unnamed man was held for questioning here today as police attempted to solve a "solo-holdup" in a soft drink parlor Sunday.

Nine patrons of the establishment, operated by Albert Veigle and Otto Koch, were passing the time in a card game when the masked bandit entered, ordered them to "act natural" so passersby would not be warned, and then robbed Veigle of approximately $250.

Bloodhounds were put on the trail and the suspect subsequently arrested in a nearby home.

SAYS RED TAPE CAUSES SUFFERING AMONG INDIANS

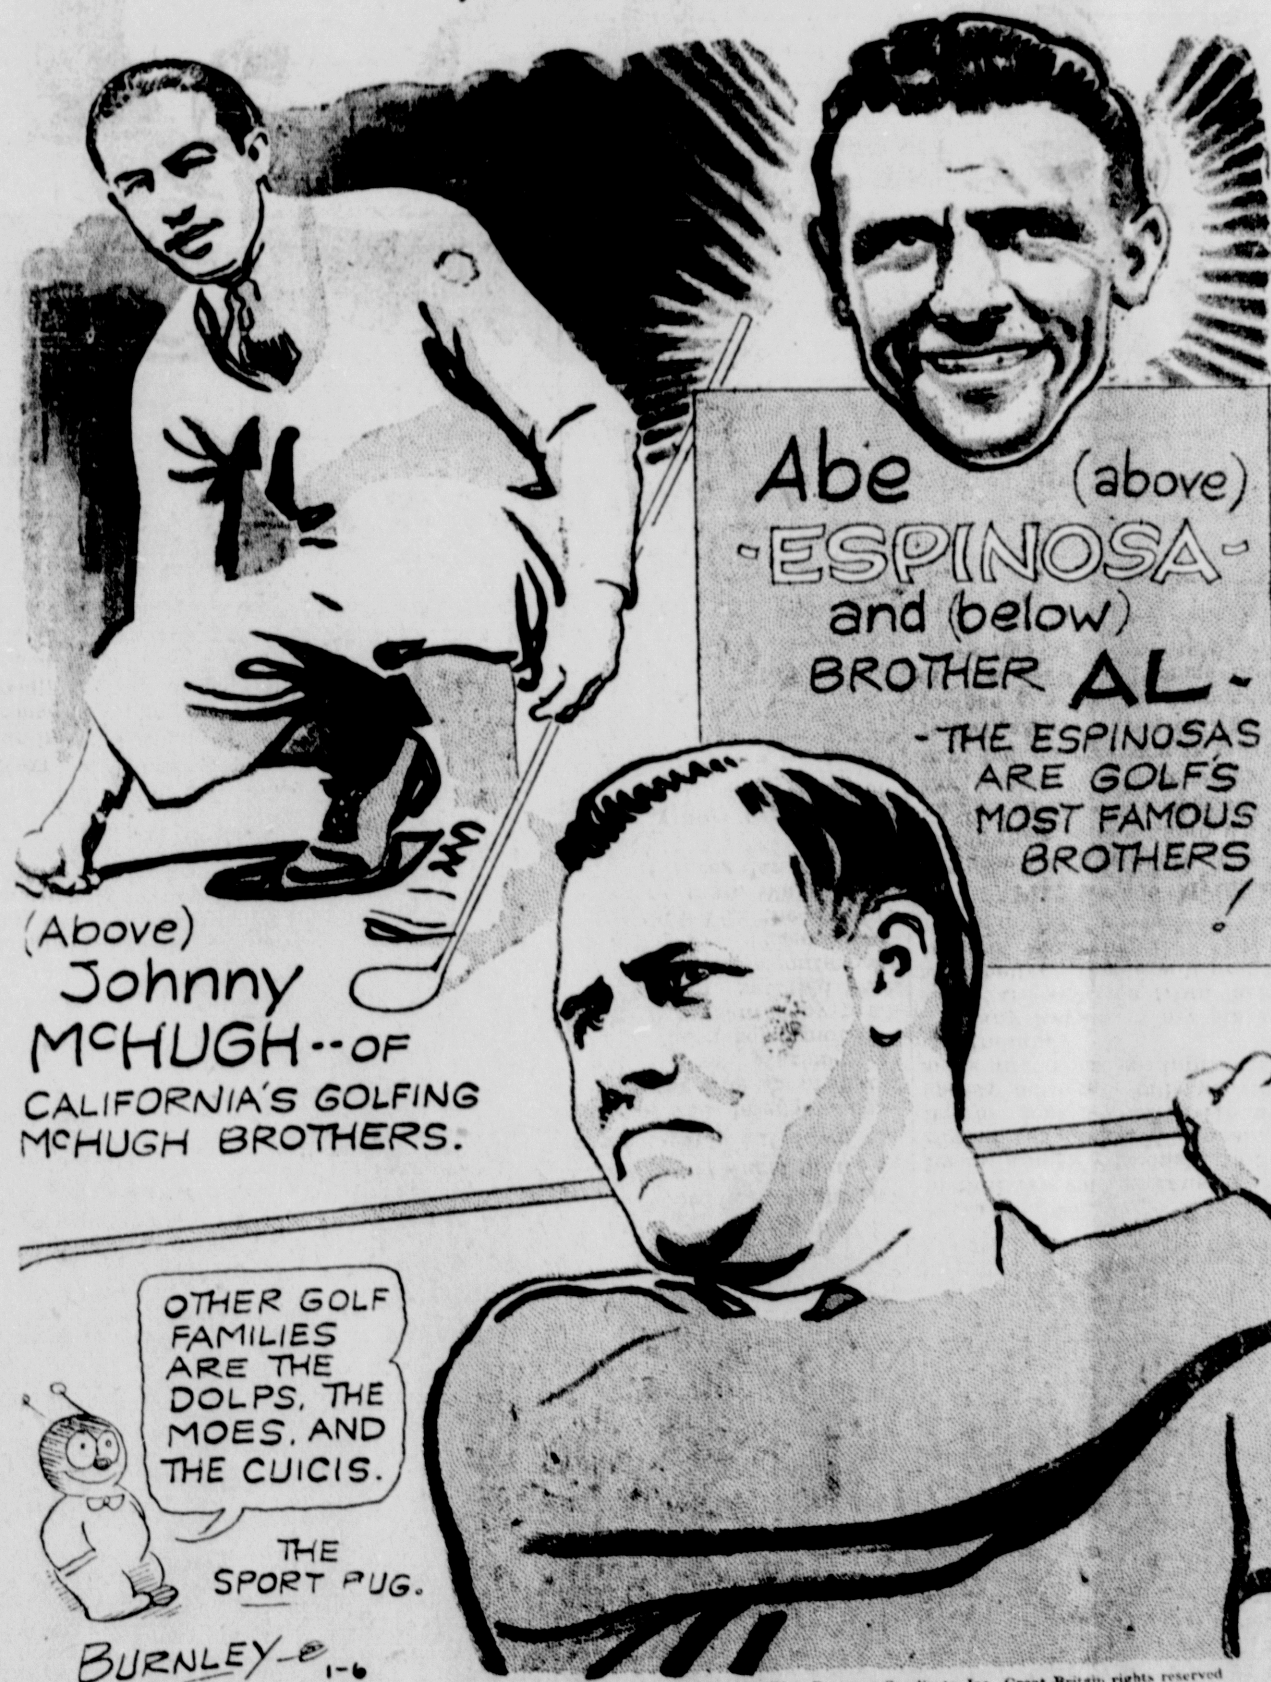

Washington, Jan. 6.—(UP)—Governor mental red tape is causing great suffering among Wisconsin Indians, Sen. Blaine, republican, Wisconsin, charged in the senate today. He asked for speedy action on bills providing pensions and increased appropriations for the Indians.

"Many Indians in my state," Blaine said, "are suffering from lack of food and shelter. Spring will find many old Indians cold in death."

Golf's "Brother" Acts

By HARDIN BURNLEY

ABE and AL ESPINOSA are golf's most distinguished brothers, both being of championship calibre for several years. No more likable stars—amateur or professional—ever earned the spotlight. The Espinosa family is of ancient Spanish root. There is a graciousness born of centuries to the charming bearing of those brothers in victory or defeat. Al has had more success on the links than Abe; he seems to be a bit greater golfer. Yet Abe (christened Abelard, the name of a great medieval scholar) frequently has beaten Al, and they are the keenest rivals always.

When Al Espinosa went to pieces in the play-off with Bobby Jones for the U. S. open championship last June, even the enthusiasts for the great amateur's victory could not conceal strong sympathy for the gentle stoic of the links who was being slaughtered after coming so close to winning U. S. golf's highest prize.

Yes, all who know them are unanimous in rating both Al and Abe as sportsmen always of a high order.

The McHugh brothers—"Babe," Johnny and Felix—are Pacific Coast favorites. John, Olympic Club champion, is an original Horton Smith enthusiast. He rates that tall strapping par with Bobby Jones!

The Dolps of Portland, Oregon, are another noted link family—Frank, Vincent and Ben. The Moes

SHIRES AFTER HIS OLD POST IN BASEBALL

ATTRACTED MORE ATTENTION AS BOXER THAN IN WHOLE BASEBALL CAREER

BATTLING CRISS CHARGES HE WAS ASKED TO TAKE A "DIVE" FIGHTING SHIRES

Chicago, Jan. 6.—(UP)—Arthur (The Great) Shires, White Sox batter who has attracted more attention as a boxer since the close of the past season than during his whole baseball career, was expected back here today to seek his post at first base.

Heralded as the great one, Shires fell from grace with the public, the press and the Michigan State boxing commission when Battling Criss charged he had been asked to take a "dive" in his bout with Shires. The bout was never held because doctors said Shires' sore neck would not permit his fighting.

James C. Mullen, Shires' promoter, said he expected Shires would arrange a conference today with Charles A. Comiskey regarding a 1930 contract.

Shires will have a busy two days before he goes back to Lansing, Mich., to wrangle with the Michigan commission about the Criss charges. He will confer with the Illinois commission and may tell his story of grief from the ringside from which he rose. If the Illinois commissioners approve, Shires will talk tonight.

Shires' suspension by the Michigan State boxing commission was extended by the National Boxing Association to 32 states. Action by the Illinois commission and at his hearing in Lansing Thursday may determine his status with the national body.

Secretary Ben Harrison of the Missouri athletic commission at Springfield, Mo., said Shires' suspension by the National Boxing Association prevented his fight with Pea Ridge Day at Kansas City this month.

COLDS MAY DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs. Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

BOXING GAME SLIDES INTO MEDIOCRITY

MINNESOTA U OPENS CAGE PLAY

INEFFICIENCY SHOWN BY PRESENT SPORT PROMOTERS

PRESENT HEADS OF MADISON SQUARE GARDEN ARE BEWILDERED

TEX RICKARD, HAD HE LIVED, WOULD HAVE HAD A HEAVY-WEIGHT CHAMPION

By FRANK GETTY (United Press Sports Editor)

New York, Jan. 6.—One year ago today the world of fisticuffs lost its most important and entertaining figure when Tex Rickard died at Miami Beach.

The year that has passed has seen the boxing game in which the late promoter was so pre-eminently successful, plunged into the doldrums of mediocrity. Those who succeeded Rickard in this modern "racket," managers who respected Tex, or at least feared and "played ball" with him, now have the present heads of Madison Square Garden running bewilderedly in circles.

Had Rickard lived, he would have a heavyweight champion today, and that would be something. It is also more than likely that the inertia in the other divisions would not exist. The master showman would have seen to that.

There is some ground for belief, however, that Tex Rickard had reached the crest of his success shortly before his sudden death and that if he had lived he might have seen his more amazing dream castles tumble to earth around him. As a promoter of boxing, he was without a peer, but Tex had dreamed of other ventures, a sporting paradise in Florida, race tracks and gambling casinos, amusement piers and real estate developments.

The wreckage of Rickard's dreams can be seen today, darkened windows and sheriff's padlocks, crumbling skeletons of steel that were never completed, mortgages over everything. Mrs. Rickard, the young widow, who carried Rickard when he was practically a millionaire, is living today in seclusion in a modest apartment at Miami Beach, trying to sell the house which Rickard had remodelled and refurnished for her by the waters of Biscayne Bay. The millionaires whom Tex was too proud to call his customers still play luxuriantly in the Florida sunshine, but when the promoters' assets were totalled there was next to nothing left for his widow and small daughter.

Rickard's successors are trying to arrange a bout to be held at Miami in February, and unless their bewilderment is their idea of publicity they are cutting rather poor figures. Last year's fight, arranged by Tex and carried through with the assistance of the glowing personality of Jack Dempsey, was a success from a financial point of view. This year's, if they have one at all, which is doubtful, is not going to be anything of the sort.

It took the imagination, fertile and daring, of Texas Rickard, to organize the fight game to its glamorous peak of 1927. It took Rickard's shrewd, suspicious mentality to keep the grasping parasites of managers who infest the sport from ruining it.

Boxing never has missed an individual as much as Tex Rickard has been missed during the past year.

WARD BASKETEERS LOSE TO MORRIS

CO. K FIVE, 36-20

UNABLE TO OVERCOME LEAD ESTABLISHED BY DOWNSIDE QUINT IN FIRST HALF

PLAY THE CROSBY RANGERS AT Ironton Wednesday; Return Game with Morris

Unable to cope with the fast breaking attack displayed by the Company K five of Morris during the first half, the Brainerd Montgomery Ward quintet lost a fast basketball game 36-20 at the downtown city yesterday afternoon. During the second half, with a changed line-up, the Ward team was able to hold the Morris team on even terms, but Morris had piled up a sufficient lead during the first half to clinch the contest. The score at the half was 24-10.

Considering the 125-mile trip to Morris with only an hour and a half to rest before the game started, Captain Nelson was well satisfied with the showing his team made. Marshall and Marlin led the Brainerd offense, the former connecting for four short field goals and the latter sinking three long shots from past the center of the large Morris floor. Etters, floor guard, and Boswell, center, were the main cogs in the Company K attack. Eckholm and Heikkinen started the game at forwards for Wards, with Marshall at center, and Captain Nelson and Swanson, guards. At the beginning of the second half Marlin was sent in at center to control the tip-off for Brainerd. Marshall was sent back to the guard position with Captain Nelson and Eckholm and Heikkinen continued at the forward posts. This lineup proved effective and Manager Gulden stated this morning that this combination would probably start against the Crosby Rangers Wednesday evening without further experimenting.

The Ward five is anxious for the return game with Morris which will be played here soon. The next game on the Ward schedule will be played with the Crosby Rangers Wednesday evening at the Ironton school, the game starting at 8 o'clock. The team will hold a practice in the new high school gym before taking on the Range five and expect to be in good condition for a hard game.

STAR GUARD, DON BONDY, INELIGIBLE BECAUSE OF FAILURE IN STUDIES

CUTS DOWN GOPHER OFFENSIVE AND DEFENSIVE POWER CONSIDERABLY

Minneapolis, Jan. 6.—(UP)—Lacking the services of Don Bondy, star guard, the University of Minnesota basketball team opens its conference campaign against a veteran Michigan quint here tonight.

Bondy was declared ineligible because of a scholastic failure and his absence, Coach Dave MacMillan declared, will considerably cut down the Gophers' offensive and defensive power. His place in the line-up probably will be taken by Fred Karsner or Harry Schoening, both sophomores. Michigan will be presented by practically the same team that tied with Wisconsin for the western conference championship last year. Three sophomores will be included in the Gopher lineup and only one man, Wallie Norgaard, center, was a regular last season.

Coach MacMillan is expected to start Sommer and Looost at the forwards, Norgaard at center, Gadler and either Karsner or Schoening at guards.

The Michigan line-up will have Truskowski and Daniels, forwards, Chapman, center, and Orwig and Kanitz, guards.

SOLO-HOLDUP IN SOFT DRINK PARLOR

New Ulm, Jan. 6.—(UP)—An unnamed man was held for questioning here today as police attempted to solve a "solo-holdup" in a soft drink parlor Sunday.

Nine patrons of the establishment, operated by Albert Veigle and Otto Koch, were passing the time in a card game when the masked bandit entered, ordered them to "act natural" so passersby would not be warned, and then robbed Veigle of approximately $250.

Bloodhounds were put on the trail and the suspect subsequently arrested in a nearby home.

SAYS RED TAPE CAUSES SUFFERING AMONG INDIANS

Washington, Jan. 6.—(UP)—Government red tape is causing great suffering among Wisconsin Indians, Sen. Blaine, republican, Wisconsin, charged in the senate today. He asked for speedy action on bills providing pensions and increased appropriations for the Indians.

"Many Indians in my state," Blaine said, "are suffering from lack of food and shelter. Spring will find many old Indians cold in death."

Past Largely Mythical

SHIRES AFTER HIS OLD POST IN BASEBALL

ATTRACTED MORE ATTENTION AS BOXER THAN IN WHOLE BASEBALL CAREER

BATTLING CRISS CHARGES HE WAS ASKED TO TAKE A "DIVE" FIGHTING SHIRES

Chicago, Jan. 6.—(UP)—Arthur (The Great) Shires, White Sox batter who has attracted more attention as a boxer since the close of the past season than during his whole baseball career, was expected back here today to seek his post at first base.

Heralded as the great one, Shires fell from grace with the public, the press and the Michigan State boxing commission when Battling Criss charged he had been asked to take a "dive" in his bout with Shires. The bout was never held because doctors said Shires' sore neck would not permit his fighting.

James C. Mullen, Shires' promoter, said he expected Shires would arrange a conference today with Charles A. Comiskey regarding a 1930 contract. Shires will have a busy two days before he goes back to Lansing, Mich., to wrangle with the Michigan commission about the Criss charges. He will confer with the Illinois commission and may tell his story of grief from the ringside from which he rose. If the Illinois commissioners approve, Shires will talk tonight.

Shires' suspension by the Michigan State boxing commission was extended by the National Boxing Association to 32 states. Action by the Illinois commission and at his hearing in Lansing Thursday may determine his status with the national body.

Secretary Ben Harrison of the Missouri athletic commission at Springfield, Mo., said Shires' suspension by the National Boxing Association prevented his fight with Pea Ridge Day at Kansas City this month.
